VIOLENT QUAKE IN MARTINIQUE 2 VOLCANOES IN ACTION

Instruments at Washington Record Tremor 2,000 Miles Away to the South or Southwest, and Lasting for Hours

Observatory Officials Declare That the Shock Must Have Been as Severe as the One Which Hit San Francisco

ST THOMAS, D. W. I. Jan. 1.—Cablegrams received here report a violent earthquake in the French islands of Martinique and the British island of St. Vincent early to-day.

Mount Pelee, the volcano in Martinique, and La Souffriere, the volcano in St. Vincent island, are reported to be active.

SHOCK AT MARTINIQUE.

A message from Fort De France, Martinique, says an earthquake shock was felt there this morning, but no damage was done. Nothing has been heard from St. Vincent since early to-day. Considerable anxiety is felt here about Kingston, Jamaica, which was partially destroyed by an earthquake a few years ago. Not a word has been received from Kingston to-day.

YUCATAN IS SHAKEN.

MERIDA, Yucatan, Jan. 1.—Yucatan was shaken this morning by the most violent earthquake shocks that have been felt in many years. Reports from surrounding towns and plantations indicate that the seismic movement was widespread and that the whole Yucatan peninsula was affected. The people were panic stricken with fear and many spent the entire day in the open, fearing still stronger shocks that would cause houses to collapse.

The oscillating movement of the earth appeared to be from south to north. This indicates that the shocks were probably much more severe south of here.

WASHINGTON HEARS NEWS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—An earthquake shock fully as violent as that which wrecked San Francisco was recorded on the seismograph at the Weather Bureau to-day. It is estimated that the tremor occurred about 2,000 miles south or southwest of Washington.

Professor Willis H. Moore expressed the opinion that great damage would result, regardless of the location of the earthquake. If on land, he said, the damage would be enormous, and if under the sea a tremendous tidal wave would follow.

He expects that his bureau will begin to hear definite reports not later than to-morrow morning.

Distinct shocks were felt at four minutes after six o'clock this morning.

There was a second at eight minutes past six, and at eleven minutes past six o'clock there was a shock sufficiently violent to lift the needle clear of the seismograph.

Officials are apprehensive lest the earthquake occurred on the isthmus of Panama. Colon is 2,100 miles from here and as the wave was south southwest and calculated at about 2,000 miles distance, they believe there is some ground for their fears.

Professor Moore's Bulletin.

"An unusually strong earthquake, at a moderate distance, was recorded by the seismograph at the Weather Bureau this morning at 6:04:38, seventy-fifth Meridian time.

"The second preliminary tremors began at 6:06:33 and the strong motion just three minutes later. The amplitude of the motion was unusually great, causing the pen to pass off the record sheet in some cases. The origin is estimated to have been at a distance of about 2,000 miles from Washington and probably to the south or southwest.

"The total duration of the record was nearly two hours."

SPURNED SUITOR KILLS FATHER OF GIRL; STABS POLICEMAN IN BATTLE

LUIGI CALONICO was shot dead behind his own restaurant counter on Hanover street last night by young Dominic Bennett of Wakefield because he forbade Bennett to make love to his seventeen-year-old daughter, Maria Calonico, one of the belles of the North End.

Michael Dentl, who rushed at the murderer, was grazed on the cheek by the fifth and last bullet in Bennett's revolver. After a furious struggle Bennett was overpowered. His revolver was taken from him but he was not searched. A few minutes later, while held by Patrolmen Thomas Byrne and William F. Crawford of Hanover street station at a patrol box, Bennett drew a stiletto and stabbed Byrne in the right knee. The officers had to club him into submission again.

Finally Bennett was locked up at the station house. Patrolman Byrne went to the Relief Hospital. The body of Calonico was taken to North Grove street morgue.

Girls Deny Knowing Man.

At the Calonico home on the top floor at No. 408 Hanover street Maria Calonico and her elder sister, Clothilda, denied incoherently that either one of them knew Bennett.

"I don't know any such man of that name," sobbed Maria, "maybe we have met such a one at some time. I guess we may know of him but not by that name. He must have been insane. He had no right to ask my father to pay attention to me."

Nunzio Calonico, the twenty-two-year-old son of the murdered man, said:

"I think this Bennett had been trying to pay attention to my sister, Maria. So far as I know he had never called at our home."

Bennett, when locked up in Hanover street police station, refused to talk except to say that he was twenty-two years old and lived at No. 46 Valley street, Wakefield. He is Americanized.

The restaurant counter which Calonico was tending when he was killed is in Di Pietro's saloon at Nos. 410-412 Hanover street. As one enters the saloon the restaurant counter is on the left, running the length of the apartment. On the right hand side is the regular saloon bar.

Came Looking for Trouble.

The shooting took place shortly after 8 o'clock. Bennett, from all accounts of the shooting, had come in not only armed with stiletto and loaded revolver, but was looking for trouble.

The place was crowded with customers on the bar side. New Year toasts were being quaffed and there was a confusion of voices. No one was at the counter side of the room except Calonico, who was waiting for orders for food.

Bennett ordered a steak. No particular attention was paid to him as Calonico waited on him till four revolver shots rang out in quick succession. The saloon was

THIEVES BREAK JEWELRY WINDOW

Burglars last night slipped out the bottom of a display case of jewelry in the doorway leading to the assemrooms of Jason Weiler & Son, wholesale and retail jewelers at No. 384 Washington street and escaped with a diamond and ruby ring worth $75. Only the ringing of the burglar alarm prevented them from rifling the case of its contents valued at $8,000.

The case is in the doorway on the first floor while the jewelry firm's salesroom is on the second floor. Three men were seen hanging around the place all day, but little attention was paid to them. About 6 o'clock the burglar alarm rang and Mr. Seeley of the firm rushed out to find that the bottom of the case had been slipped out. Only one ring was missing. He gave chase, but the men eluded him. A good description of them has been furnished to the police.

ROOSEVELT LOVING CUP FROM PEOPLE

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 1.—Edward H. Walker of College Park, once candidate for Governor of Georgia, has just received a letter from President Taft in reference to a suggestion he made to Mr. Taft in a letter of some time ago that a loving cup be presented Theodore Roosevelt upon his return to America, the money to be raised by national subscription. The President says:

My dear Sir:—There is no honor that could be done Theodore Roosevelt that would not have my endorsement, but the propriety of the use of my name in that which you would like to have a purely popular endorsement I question.

I think you had better, therefore, if you contemplate such a movement, initiate it yourself without the aid of men as close to him as I am.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM H. TAFT.

It is now Mr. Walker's idea to have the Governor of each State and Territory appoint a private citizen, the whole to be known as the National Citizens' Committee which will have charge of securing subscriptions.

MRS. EDDY IN POEM WRITES GREETING TO NEW YEAR

CLASS AT HER HOME

EX TEMPORE, JAN. 1, 1910

I.

O blessings infinite!
O glad new year!
Sweet sign and substance
Of God's presence here.

II.

Give us not only angels' sounds
But Science vast to which belongs
The tongue of angels
And the song of songs.

THAT Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, leader of the Christian Scientists, enters into the New Year with her mentality as vigorous and her perceptions of the beautiful as keenly attuned as ever, is shown by the above verses, which the venerable head of the Christian Science Church indited yesterday with characteristic facility of expression.

Mrs. Eddy takes her daily drive and holds her daily gathering of students in her household. There was more interest than usual in yesterday's assembly at Mrs. Eddy's home at Chestnut Hill on account of the New Year. Mrs. Eddy was rightly appreciative of the New Year time. She can readily utilize the words of prose in which to convey her thoughts. Her extemporaneous delivery of these verses was considered as a particularly happy indication of this.

The poetic faculty of Mrs Eddy is well known, not only to her followers, but also to the general public. Among her best-known poems of early days is "The Old Man of the Mountain," inspired by the rock profile in the White Mountains.

She has written hymns which have been set to music and which are contained in the Christian Science hymnal. In her miscellaneous writings outside of "Science and Health" are to be found many poems and bits of verse. Collections of her poems are in the Boston Public Library.

CHEAP GAS IN CHELSEA.

Reduction in Price Follows Consolidation of Companies.

In Chelsea yesterday the price of gas was reduced from 95 cents for 1,000 cubic feet to 90 cents. This reduction was due to the consolidation of the Chelsea Gas Company with the East Boston Gas Company. Chelsea people have been paying 95 cents a 1,000 cubic feet for the last three years.

In Revere yesterday the Suburban Gas and Electric Company made a voluntary reduction in gas of five cents, or $1 per 1,000 instead of $1.05. Electricity was reduced from 17 cents to 15 cents per kilowatt hour.

This is the fourth reduction the Suburban Gas and Electric Company has made in Revere. Ten years ago the people of that town were paying $1.20 a 1,000 cubic feet.

DR. ELIOT LEARNS A LITTLE.

Asks Reports to Enlighten Him on Meaning of Slang Phrase.

President Eliot of Harvard was a guest of honor at a dinner the other night and happened to hear a reporter use the slang phrase "on the level." Dr. Eliot pricked up his ears.

"Tell me, young man," he said interestedly, "what is the meaning of that 'on the level.' I should like very much to know."

The reporter explained. Dr. Eliot pondered, then smiled happily.

"I see," he said, "very much the same as being 'on the square,' isn't it? Well, now, I have learned something."

Schreck Wins a Fight.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 1.—Mike Schreck won a quick victory over Sam Wallace, of Lockland, Ohio, in the latter cold with a right punch to the jaw in exactly two minutes and their seconds after the scrap started. Wallace was floored four times during the bout.

Attell K. O.s Out Kelly.

Canvass of Nearly 2,000 Voters of the City Indicate Two Leading Candidates Close Together With Hibbard a Bad Third

Figures Gathered in Downtown and Outlying Districts Show Significant Changes From Conditions of Two Years Ago

THE first "straw vote" in the city campaign—the most interesting and most fiercely contested in the history of Boston—is presented herewith by the Sunday American, and it indicates that James J. Storrow and John F. Fitzgerald are running a neck-and-neck race:

| | |
|---|---|
| FITZGERALD | 778 |
| STORROW | 731 |
| HIBBARD | 133 |
| TAYLOR | 33 |

For the past two days reporters for the Sunday American, trained for the work, have gathered the vote. Their instructions were clear—accuracy above all—to obtain an impartial and non-partisan test vote. The result may mean something; it may mean nothing. All that can be said of it is that the American believes it to be accurate.

The total number of votes canvassed was 1,675. Of the 112,000 registered in Boston it is assumed that between 80,000 and 85,000 will go to the polls, so that the Sunday American "straw vote" indicates the choice of a little less than 2 per cent of those who will vote on election day.

A glance over the accompanying table will show that it is fairly representative of the more populous and busier districts of Boston. The Back Bay and the other great residential sections of the in-town city and the suburbs were not canvassed, because of the manifest difficulty of getting at the head of the household. This fact must be taken into consideration by those who undertake to draw inferences from the figures.

A Basis for Figuring.

The canvass was made merely to give the deputers, the politicians, statesmen and others who are most vitally interested in the result a basis upon which they can figure in anticipation of the city election of one week from Tuesday.

The canvass was made in twenty-eight business sections downtown and traffic centers of outlying sections. The places where it was made are stated in the accompanying table, and thoughtful men may draw their own deductions as to the probable vote January 11 by a fair consideration of the natural tendency of those localities taken in connection with the total vote cast.

The result does seem to indicate clearly and beyond all doubt what has been generally conceded—that the contest lies between Fitzgerald and Storrow. It also seems to indicate that the most of the voters are nearly evenly divided as between Fitzgerald and Storrow.

If it were possible to maintain percentages throughout the city, as indicated by the American's "straw vote" it would indicate that Fitzgerald would win by the close margin of about 2,500. Thus, nine days before election, it looks like a rousing batch between Fitzgerald and Storrow and anybody's choice as which will win.

Small Hibbard Vote.

On the basis of the 1,675 votes carried out throughout the city—the vote would be about as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| FITZGERALD | 42,5 |
| STORROW | 40,5 |
| HIBBARD | 3,1 |
| TAYLOR | 9 |
| TOTAL | 95,1 |

In the canvass, Hibbard receive more than one-sixth as many v either Storrow or Fitzgerald. Tay ceived but one-fourth as many vo Hibbard

Carrying out the percentages Fitzgerald would win by 2,585 plurality over Storrow. Hibbard would get nearly 2,500 less than the 10,000 credited to him in the American last Sunday, and Taylor would get 3,185 less than the 5,000 he was credited with then.

During the canvass, the reporters noticed unusual interest on the part of everybody and those approached gave their preferences without reservation. No difficulty was encountered in getting at the opinions of the voters canvassed.

It is difficult this year to make estimates from "straw votes" because of the absence of party designations on the ballot. The two principal candidates—Fitzgerald and Storrow—are both Democrats, as also is Taylor. Hibbard is the

GIRLS SNOWBALL A FIRE BRIGADE

Ungrateful Music Students Pelt the Men Who Saved Dormitory from Ruin.

Several girl students at the New England Conservatory of Music had some fun last night not exactly on the New Year's program, when they pelted firemen with snowballs.

About 10 o'clock a lighted candle in a window on the fourth floor of Gardner Hall, No. 133 Hemenway street, Back Bay, a girls' dormitory of the Conservatory, set fire to a lace curtain. In an instant there was a flash of flame, followed by screams.

At Gardner Hall seventy-five girls ordinarily lodge, but during the holidays but twenty-four have been there. When "Fire" was shouted through the halls many of the young women fled, pell mell down the stairs.

The firemen came through the snow-filled streets with difficulty, but upon extinguished the flames. Only $10 damage was done. As the firemen were getting their apparatus in readiness to drive back to the stables several of the girls pelted them with snowballs and shrieked with laughter.

MAN FATALLY BURNED.

Lynn Woman Bravely Tries to Save Aged Veteran.

LYNN, Jan. 2.—After a desperate attempt to save her father, Frank Smith, a seventy-year-old Confederate soldier, from burning to death early this morning, Anna M. Smith, terribly burned about the face, head and hands, was forced to flee from his bedroom, leaving him to be fatally burned before firemen could rescue him.

Smith, it is believed, was smoking in bed. The bed caught fire and Anna, who slept in the next room, was awakened by her father's coughing. She smelled smoke and rushed to his side. In vain she tried to pull him from the bed. She was finally driven from the room, that was filled with flame, and when the firemen reached the house at No. 8 Red Rock street they found the old soldier under the bed slowly dying from his injuries. He was rushed to a hospital, where it is expected he will die in a few hours. The house was not badly damaged by fire.

BRIDE OF 14 MONTHS NOW SEEKS DIVORCE

Edwin F. Cook, Jr., of Brookline Will Face Petition on Return Home.

When Edwin F. Cook, Jr., travelling salesman, arrives home from a business trip next Tuesday he will face a divorce petition with attorney, legal restraint, an attachment on his property for $2,000 and formal allegations of cruelty and disloyalty to his wife, Mrs. Frances V. Cook, who declares that she can stand the domestic relations no longer after her matrimonial experience of a year and two months.

With her infant child, Mrs. Cook, a beautiful blonde-haired young matron of twenty-five, is living in a finely furnished suite at No. 10 Park street, Brookline, into which she recently moved from No. 55 Addington road.

Both belong to good families in Philadelphia, where they were married in October, 1908. They have made many warm friends in Brookline, who have regarded them as a very devoted couple. During November last their child was born.

The filing of the divorce petition created the greatest surprise here and in Philadelphia. In reply to the questions of her relatives and friends, Mrs. Cook declared that her husband has been brutal almost ever since their marriage, all of which will be a matter of evidence when the case is tried. It is understood that he is not a drinking man, but she additionally charges Mr. Cook with acts of a serious nature, tending to disrupt their married happiness.

In her petition Mrs. Cook asks for custody of a child and an allowance for their maintenance while the case is pending.

In one clause she asks the court to prohibit her husband from interfering with her in any way. The court allowed an attachment to be served upon the husband's property for $2,000. A hearing will soon be held upon the petition for money allowance. Attorney Fred S. Elliott appears for Mrs. Cook.

$200 Tailor Shop Fire.

Fire at 12:10 this morning in the one-story wooden building at No. 60 Dearborn street, Roxbury, occupied by Mrs. Rosalie Taylor as a tailoring shop did $200 damage. An overheated stove is believed to have caused the blaze.

CANVASS PROVES MAYORALTY RACE ONE OF CLOSEST IN CITY'S HISTORY

only one who is Republican. The "straw vote" has indicated that party lines have been somewhat wavy to a greater degree than ever before in the history of Boston, and the political managers are at sea.

Not Loss For Fitzgerald.

Another peculiar result of the "straw vote" is to indicate what individual leadership is doing in various districts. The leaders have divided outside the lines of party cleavage, and the districts so far as the "straw vote" indicates—show overturns that cannot yet be closely understood. In many of the districts, it is clear that the voters do not intend to follow the party leaders.

Going into the details of the "straw vote," Fitzgerald shows a net loss from two years ago—that is, he loses more of his 1907 voters than he will gain, from new voters for other candidates tried. This may or may not be significant. Fitzgerald lost by about 2,000 in 1907. Should he lose a new factor in the field, there is no way of judging comparisons on his vote. He seems to gain from men who voted for Hibbard two years ago, from new voters and from those who supported John A. Coulthurst in 1907. He gets practically all of the latter vote.

In order to beat Fitzgerald, he must naturally get the most of the Hibbard vote of 1907 and much of the Coulthurst vote, provided Fitzgerald does not lose substantially from his 1907 total. All things must be taken into consideration in figuring out Fitzgerald's possible gain or loss from his 1907 vote as indicated in the "straw ballot." Readers will have to determine the significance for themselves, but the net results and losses should be valuable in arriving at the probable result.

The Vote in Detail.

SOUTH BOSTON.

One hundred and fifty ballots taken in the business section of Wards 13, 14 and 15 of that section showed:

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
65 79 6 0

In this section 16 voters who cast their ballots for Fitzgerald in 1907 will vote for some other candidate this year. Eighteen who voted for other candidates in 1907 will vote for Fitzgerald this year. This indicates a net gain of two for Fitzgerald.

PARK STREET SUBWAY.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
62 25 9 2

Of this number three who voted for Fitzgerald in 1907 change to some other candidate this year. Nine who voted for others in 1907 swing to Fitzgerald. A net gain of six for Fitzgerald here.

DOWNTOWN HOTELS.

One hundred ballots at Adams House, Parker's, Young's, Crawford House, the Quincy House and the American House.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
60 34 4 2

Fitzgerald gains nine votes here, as eleven who voted for other candidates in 1907 will vote for Fitzgerald this year, while two who voted for him in 1907 will change to others this year. A net gain of nine for Fitzgerald.

ELEVATED TRAINS.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
45 34 7 4

Eight who voted for Fitzgerald in 1907 change to either of the other three candidates, while but two change to Fitzgerald, making a net loss to Fitzgerald of six.

LABOR UNIONS.

Seventy-five ballots taken in certain labor unions:

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
15 57 2 1

Twenty-four who voted against Fitzgerald in the last campaign will be with him in this. Four who were with him then are not this year. A net gain for Fitzgerald of twenty.

NORTH END.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
14 32 4 0

In this group Fitzgerald gets two who were with others in 1907 and loses one who was with him in 1907. A net gain of one.

TREMONT BUILDING.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
33 15 2 0

Two who were with others then Fitzgerald in 1907 change in his favor in this campaign, while but one who was with him then is against him now. A net gain of one for Fitzgerald.

BRIGHTON.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
29 30 0 0

In this section six who were with Fitzgerald in 1907 are with some other candidate this year. Two who were with others then with him this year, a net loss of four for Fitzgerald.

EAST BOSTON TUNNEL.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
18 31 1 0

Here four who were with others in 1907 are with Fitzgerald this year. Six who were with him then are against him this year. A net loss of two for Fitzgerald.

MARKET DISTRICT.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.

Fitzgerald loses one supporter here and gains one. No net change from last election.

EXCHANGE BUILDING.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
41 4 1 0

SULLIVAN SQUARE.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
18 25 7 0

Ten who were with others in 1907 are with Fitzgerald this year, while but seven have forsaken him. A net gain of three for Fitzgerald.

CHARLESTOWN.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
0 44 0 0

A net gain of two for Fitzgerald as he gains two supporters who were not with him in 1907 and does not lose any.

WEST END.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
18 30 2 0

Fitzgerald loses one here as five of his 1907 supporters are not with him now and he only had four who were not with him then but are now.

OLD SOUTH BUILDING.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
30 17 3 0

Seventeen voters in this building were with Fitzgerald in 1907, but are not now. Six were with others then but are with him this year. A net loss of eleven for Fitzgerald.

CASTLE SQUARE.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
18 17 2 13

DORCHESTER.

Fifty votes taken at Grove Hall:

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
21 17 10 2

Fifty votes taken at Fields Corner:

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
16 15 8 1

At Grove Hall Fitzgerald loses seven and gains three. At Fields Corner he loses four and gains eight. Averaging the two, his chances remain unchanged in these two places.

FOREST HILLS.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
19 28 2 1

Here three who were with Fitzgerald in 1907 are not this year. He gains one, making his net loss in this section two.

ATLANTIC AVENUE.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
24 15 1 1

This group shows a net loss of twelve for Fitzgerald. Thirteen who were with him in 1907 are not now. One who was with Hibbard in that campaign is with Fitzgerald now.

T WHARF.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
25 24 1 0

These ballots show that ten who were with others than Fitzgerald in 1907 are with him this year, while but seven were with him then are with one of the other three this year. A net gain of three.

DUDLEY STREET.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
27 18 2 0

A net gain here of two for Fitzgerald. Four changed from his opponents of 1907 to him this year, while but two supporters of that campaign.

SULLIVAN SQUARE.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
17 27 6 0

A net gain here of two for Fitzgerald. Ten who were with others in 1907 have joined him this year, while he lost but eight supporters of that campaign.

WASHINGTON STREET.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
17 30 3 0

In this section Fitzgerald loses five. Eight who were with him in 1907 are not with him, while he gains but three new supporters.

IN WARD NINE.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
15 30 3 1

Fitzgerald loses five more here. Six who were with him in 1907 are not now, while but one new supporter has joined his ranks.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
21 24 6 0

Another loss of five here. Fitzgerald gains but four new supporters over 1907, while he lost nine of that year.

FORT HILL SQUARE.

Storrow, Fitzgerald, Hibbard, Taylor.
20 24 6 0

Poll Indicates That Coulthurst Support Is Going Largely to Storrow.

WIFE WINS COURT FIGHT AND GETS $150 A MONTH

Mrs. Frederick Stock, Jr., Is Also Awarded the Furniture Her Husband Took.

AFTER three months' legal battle, Mrs. Maude J. Stock has won the fight to make her husband, Frederick W. Stock, Jr., son of the wealthy Michigan flour manufacturer, support her, and she has forced him to return her personal effects, including household furniture, which she says he took from their beautiful home last September, since which time they have been separated. Mr. Stock, who is connected with his father's firm at the Boston offices in the Old South building, has been ordered by the probate court to pay his wife $200 at once and $150 a month beginning yesterday.

Friends of the couple are now wondering whether Mrs. Stock will file a libel for divorce against her husband. These friends argue that the affairs of the couple will eventually come to light in the divorce court.

Mrs. Stock has already filed one libel for divorce, but she withdrew it less than a week after filing it.

The Stocks had a beautiful home at No. 711 Washington street, Brighton, near the Newton line, but separated last September, following the arrest of Mr. Stock by Patrolman Henry F. Barry.

On September 4 Stock appeared in the Roxbury court on complaint of Officer Barry. The name of Helen Woods was mentioned in the case. He pleaded not guilty, but on September 10, he retracted his plea and pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $200. The fine was paid.

Since the separation Mr. Stock has lived at Hotel Carlton and other places. Mrs. Stock is living with friends in Newbury street. In her request for separate maintenance Mrs. Stock said that prior to June last she received from $75 to $100 a month for her personal expense.

Among other things the father said that his son Frederick, while in charge of the Boston offices of the firm, had drawn checks against him for $165,500 during the last four years. One paragraph of the father's deposition reads: "In addition to the above ($165,500.17) he has checked out and used without my knowledge and consent during the last five years the sum of $11,041.31. As a consequence of these excessive checks he is indebted to me in the sum of $276,820.65."

TAFT CHILD RETURNS.

Not Kidnapped, She Says; Just Visited a Chum Over Night.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 1.—Twelve-year-old Dorothy Valentine Taft, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen S. Taft, cousins of the President, walked demurely into the home of her foster parents at Seaside to-day, blissfully ignorant of the trouble and worry her absence had caused. According to the girl she was not kidnapped. When she returned from Pomona yesterday she missed the Taft car at the station, found the house locked up, and went to the home of a schoolmate, where she remained over night. A search for the kidnappers had been begun.

DEATH STOPS DIVORCE.

Mrs. Raymond Marsh of Boston Soon to Leave France.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—Mrs. Raymond Marsh of Boston, well known in Parisian society, will not take her long planned trip to the Indies and Japan, as she had intended, early this year. Instead she will probably go back to Boston. A lifting of the domestic clouds is the cause of the change in intention. Mrs. Marsh was about to obtain a decree divorcing her from her husband, the son of a well known and wealthy merchant, when he arrived here this week. His coming was entirely unexpected. Mutual friends were also surprised to learn that Mrs. Fitzgibbons had died in London about a week ago. She was the principal cause, it is alleged, of the marital troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Marsh, and when he came to Paris and explained matters to his wife there was, it is said, a reconciliation.

If Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Marsh live in this city their names are not to be found in any social register nor in the city directory.

DYING MAN FORCED TO 60-HOUR TRIP

Much Indignation in Lynn Over the Treatment Accorded a Popular Young Man.

There is much indignation in Lynn over the death of John W. Gould, who resided with his parents at No. 27 Michigan avenue. Gould died in the Lynn hospital last night from injuries received last Wednesday at the Ryan No. 2 Logging Camp at Northeast Carry, Maine, which is sixty-four miles north of Bangor.

The young man was twenty-five years old and had an excellent reputation. His parents say that his skull was fractured in a camp accident and that instead of taking him to a Bangor hospital or giving him medical treatment he was sent in care of a fellow employe all the way to Lynn, a sixty-hour journey, without any medical treatment whatever.

The Lynn hospital physicians said that the man was treated with less consideration than a wounded animal and that his case was hopeless hours before he was brought to them. Quick treatment and the surgical operation of trephining the skull, they said, would have given him a fighting chance for life while he had absolutely no chance at all in the way he was shipped home.

Papyrus Club Dines.

The thirty-eighth annual dinner of the Papyrus Club was held in Young's Hotel last night and entertained all of its predecessors. The Rev. S. W. Crothers of Cambridge and Ralph D. Paine of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., were guests of honor. President Sydney C. Williams and Secretary William H. Stoddard had charge of the arrangements.

FEAR BIGGEST SHIP WRECKED IN STORM

Somerville Man In Command of $190,000 Wyoming on Maiden Trip.

LEWISTON, Me., Jan. 1.—Much anxiety is felt in regard to the six masted schooner, Wyoming, the largest sailing craft afloat, which sailed on her maiden trip from Bath, December 21, for Newport News, Va., and has not yet been spoken or reported. She is now several days overdue, the regular sailing time being five days. It is feared she met with some mishap during the recent storm.

She was launched from the Percy & Small Ship Yard at Bath, December 13, and is valued at $190,000. She is commanded by Captain Angus McLeod of Somerville, Mass.

PRIEST TRIES SUICIDE.

Connecticut Pastor Shoots Himself in a New York Hotel.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—By shooting himself through the temple Father Richard Grogan, 63 years old, who is connected with St. Mary's home at West Hartford, Conn., attempted to commit suicide this afternoon in his room in the Grand Union Hotel. The wound, the surgeons in Bellevue Hospital said, will not prove fatal, and the police made him a prisoner. Immediately after the priest had tried to end his life, he opened the door of his room, when employes started to enter, and frankly admitted that he had tried to die. He was unable to give any reasons for his act except to say that he must have suffered from a "brain storm."

PEACE THE KEYNOTE OF THE NATION'S NEW YEAR

Noted Men of Europe and America Offer Their Sentiments for 1910.

WAR TALK IS SHUNNED

THE BOSTON AMERICAN to-day presents New Year's thoughts gathered from statesmen and leaders in the world's commerce and activities, both here and abroad. Among the last named are representatives in Washington of nearly all the nations.

The keynote to nearly all these New Year's watchwords is PEACE. It finds expression from our own Senators and from foreign diplomats.

These opinions are essentially illuminating at this time, because they deal with the issues which most concern the nation, as it enters upon the year 1910.

By Baron Rosen, Russian Ambassador:

Russia has advocated peace. The other nations have agreed with her. Peace, after hundreds of years of turmoil and wars, cannot be achieved in a day, but we are nearer it far more quickly than could have been hoped for, because even peace must be perfect, and it will not have the road to it must be traversed cautiously, safely and surely. But we know the way—all the world knows it.

By Baron Von Hengervar, Austrian Ambassador:

Why should there be even the suspicion of trouble arising in the future? Man does not want it. Calamities have occurred, and the whole world was like, spiritually and substantially, thus misleading surface.

By the realization that the people beyond the frontier or beyond the seas and mountains are our friends, and they wish them harm. Time is too valuable, and life too precious to waste time mulling over what may happen. Let us rejoice in what we have and what we are going to have.

By James Bryce, British Ambassador:

The man who achieves success in life is the man who attends to his work—in other words, the man who attends to business—to the welfare of himself and those dependent upon him, thus safeguarding, either following his duty or responsibility. The same can be said of a government. It is for this that the twentieth century will be renowned, for commerce, for progress in the manner of living, for the successful extraction from this world of all the boons it offers to those who are willing to get after them. Every nation will strive for commercial supremacy, and it seems that every one of its citizens will have to work toward this end. The competition that will follow will be but an incentive toward progress. The era of prosperity before us will be more substantial than any in the past.

By Baron Des Planches, Italian Ambassador:

Prosperity and happiness—like peace, whether individual or national—are achieved by a determination to make most of ourselves to have them. Once upon a time men and women were fought with cold strife, even in their cradle days. Later this doctrine was followed by one-half of the world, thus worrying the peaceful remainder. Now, thereof, peace is in our hearts, and we are determined to have it. For France means to uphold it, and with it all that goes with it. As an Anglo-Saxon general said, to paraphrase him, "War is not heaven."

By Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador:

Let all talk of war alone. There would be no war within our time, and during that period we shall be able to adjust circumstances to prevent a possible conflict. Freedom will always be rampant, no matter how well situated humanity may be. We are progressing in everything. The next hundred years will be even more generous to us if we are but worthy of it. We shall all celebrate peace as we are willing to maintain our rights—and by "us" is intended the world. Even a sharp dissension between friends is the destruction of trouble. Germany will do her share, because everyone else will. The Germans want peace as much as the American, because they have no time except for work. All our friends believe so.

By Baron Uchida, Japanese Ambassador:

The Japanese have learned, as any other nationality, the cost of turmoil. Now that we are in the midst of a cumulative national peace and advancement, which is reflected upon us by the rest of the world, we cannot but be for peace. We are for one else. In fact, Japan is as far from a war as possible; all rumors to the contrary are false.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Tanlac Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of need.

"I was restored to health by Tanlac, and Dr. Hartman's medicine and books. People ask me from different places, and are told that I can tell all of my happiness, and that I was cured by the use of Tanlac.

"I was a chronic catarrh. My husband had a bad case of asthma, my daughter of stomach and catarrh of the stomach, and myself catarrh of the throat. When I took it I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

"I remained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for you. May God give you a long life to your work."

BOSTON MAN ARRESTED WITH A PISTOL ON WAY TO SEE THE PRESIDENT

FRANK M. TOWER, who recently sold his barber shop at No 3 Tremont row, was arrested by the police of Washington, D. C., yesterday on the charge of carrying concealed weapons.

The arrest and the reticence of both the Washington and Boston police regarding the case with mystery, which was only partly dissipated when Tower was allowed his liberty on a $300 cash bail put up by his wife.

Tower admits that he was in Washington carrying out part of a long-cherished plan to see President Taft and had decided that the best way was to get into touch with the thousands of New Year callers, and in that way get to the President. He said he was on his way to California, where he will make his home, and had merely stopped over, en route, at the capital.

Why he carried a loaded .38-calibre revolver on such a mission is a mystery, and the incident was pretty well up the country's nerves last night. It was in just such a reception at the Buffalo Exposition that Leon Czolgosz carried out his deadly assault on President McKinley.

The secret police about these open-handed receptions wherein almost any crank or madman may find a place, and they are in the closest touch with the police of the big cities for days before the President is prepared to hold such a levee.

The Boston police denied in the most emphatic way that they had given the capital police any tip to arrest Tower, and Deputy Superintendent Watts said that no one had reported that Tower's reputation was good and that he had served the Washington authorities to that effect.

Tower was arrested as he got off the Washington train at the foot of the fourteenth-street boy score with him. He was not taken in court, as is the usual custom, but was kept in the First Precinct station until the New Year's day levee at the White House was all over.

Then he was identified and put on a promise to appear in court to-morrow morning. He declined to talk for publication on his pleasant experience, except to make the most emphatic denial of any intention to harm the President or make use of his revolver.

It is not unlikely that Tower, a highly nervous man, the police say, with the several hundred dollars netted him by the sale of his barber shop on his person in cash, carried the weapon for self-protection.

At No. 3 Tremont row Mrs. George E. Grow, a friend of the Towers, spoke highly of them, but said she had noted recently that Tower was "inclined to be quarrelsome."

"Soon after Mr. Tower had sold his business, Mrs. Tower came to me and said that the family were going to Los Angeles, California, to live," she said. Last Wednesday Mrs. Tower called first they were going to Washington to attend the New Year's reception of President Taft.

"I told her that there would be thousands there and that she was lucky to be one of the fortunates to be near the President. She said that her husband had set his mind on going at that time to would see the President some way or another. I thought nothing of it at the time, but now that you tell me it makes me think."

"Although I have said that he was peculiar I never thought for a minute that he would attempt anything dangerous. He was always good to his wife and his little boy, going without himself in order to make them happy."

Tower said when he sold his barber shop that he intended to open another at Los Angeles. He came to Boston from Vermont, where he was born.

HAMMERSTEIN LOSS A QUARTER MILLION

Owns Up to It and Says He's Ready for Understanding With Metropolitan.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Oscar Hammerstein looked worried when a reporter of the American asked him point blank whether it was true, as his son Arthur had said, that negotiations were pending between the managements of the Manhattan and Metropolitan looking to an understanding between the two opera houses.

"My son Arthur is one man and I am another," said Mr. Hammerstein. "I can tell you, though, and you may publish what I say, that I am in favor of an arrangement between the rival managements.

"I am not begging for an understanding. The Metropolitan people probably need one more than I do. But it would be good for both of us. It would be good for art.

"At present we are the monkeys of the public. We are at the mercy of the singers. The threat cutting that goes on between the Metropolitan and the Manhattan is ruinous and undignified.

"Why should artists who get $2000 a performance in Paris ask $1,000 here? Living more expensive in America? Stuff! It's cheaper. Some of the singers who are getting $2000 here live in apartments that cost $7 a week and do their own cooking.

"Things have reached a point at which it is humanly impossible to continue giving opera. This season—as to now—I have lost about a quarter of a million dollars. And what do you suppose the Metropolitan management is likely to lose this season? Eight hundred thousand dollars, old top says!

"Two causes account for these tremendous losses. First the excessive production of opera. Next, the competition of the two houses for the singers.

"And if there is no decision? Shall I stop giving opera?

"Well, I'll ever lay down? I shall go on just ever whatever happens. But I shall find some way of avoiding the ruinous consequences of competition.

Negroes Shoot Up Town.

RESTAURANT KEEPER SHOT DEAD AS RESULT OF A LOVE QUARREL

Overpowers Slayer.

When the smoke cleared, Luigi Calonico was found dead on the floor behind his counter with a round, blackened bullet-hole in his forehead and with three other bullets in his body. The big mirror back of the counter was shattered. Michael Denti, the lead barkeeper, who had had his head blown from him, was locked in a desperate grip with Bennett on the floor. The crowd, which had gathered to the scene, came to Denti's aid and Bennett was overpowered.

Later Frank Tucci, one of the barrenders, who was in the saloon at the shooting, said:

"This fellow, Bennett, came in and sat down on one of the counter stools. I saw that he was having some argument with Calonico. Bennett got up and walked to and fro for a minute. One of the men who had been playing cards said something about 'This fellow won't pay.'

"Then Bennett walked up to Calonico and argued with him in a few tone. I heard Calonico say: 'No—no.'

"Then there was a shot, and sound of broken glass. Bennett had drawn a revolver and fired at Calonico. The first bullet broke the mirror back of Calonico. Before any one could move to see what those more shots. The first of these hit Calonico in the forehead. Probably that one killed him. Two more shots followed, the next I knew Denti had hold of Bennett."

Dares Death to Get Assailant.

What Denti had done was to vault over the bar at the sound of shooting and grapple with the crazed youth. Bennett had just time to swing around toward Denti and blaze away with his left hand revolver, which stung Denti on the cheek, as it sped by. The next second Denti had pinned down on the floor and was reaching for the revolver.

Then said that after Bennett was mastered, he turned to a bystander and yelled: "Take the gun and kill me now." The chambers of the revolver were empty.

The shooting had gathered a crowd outside, and Patrolman Byrne came into the saloon while the men inside were holding Bennett. While Byrne was taking possession of the prisoner Patrolman Crawford walked in. Both officers gripped the man and started him off to a patrol box nearby.

Attacks Officer With Stiletto.

While they were standing at the box, just before the patrol wagon arrived, Bennett managed to slide one hand into a pocket and yank out his stiletto. He made a desperate downward slash and the stiletto blade bit into Byrne's right knee. Fortunately the blade pierced the knee cords, else Byrne might have been crippled for life. As it was he received a painful but comparatively harmless flesh wound, which was liter treated at the Relief Hospital.

Bennett struggled furiously to free himself, and it is said that the officers had to club him before he would yield. When the wagon arrived, however, he was tractable enough. He was booked at the station on a charge of murder.

Meanwhile Medical Examiner MacGrath had been notified and had ordered the body of Calonico to be taken to the North Grove street morgue.

Scenes of the shooting had been carried to the Calonico home at No. 408 Hanover street. This is next door to the saloon. The Calonico tenement is on the third and top floor of the building, over the saloon.

Daughters Unusually Pretty.

At first the family was told that the father had been hurt. It was not for an hour that the wife and daughters knew that Calonico was dead.

The family, in addition to the father and mother, includes Nunzio, 22; Clothilda, 19; Maria, 17; Joanna, 8, and a boy of seven.

The two older girls, Clothilda and Maria, are splendid specimens of young Italian beauty. Maria is the more plump of the two, possessing a well-rounded figure and round face. Clothilda has a more oval face and is taller than her sister. The two have dark, flashing complexions, however, and form a feminine pair hard to excel in their Latin comeliness.

On the first intimation of the trouble the wife and children, except Nunzio, the eldest son, became hysterical. As neighbors came in and the excitement was born upon the family that serious trouble had occurred their hysterianism increased. When they finally learned that the husband and father was dead they gave vent to the full emotion of their demonstrative natures.

In Love with Girl of 17.

From neighbors it was first learned that Dominic Bennett, the murderer, had been endeavoring to win to pay attention to Maria, the seventeen-year-old daughter. The remark of Nunzio Calonico that "Bennett wanted to keep company with my sister" gave more authority to this report. The mother was too much overcome to talk about the tragedy, about her daughters, or about any admirers they had.

The two older girls speak broken English, combined with their agitation, made it next to impossible to get coherent statements from them.

As they talked they interrupted each other in gasping phrases. The burden of what they said was:

"We do not know any such man as this Bennett—I guess we may have met him somewhere—maybe he went by another name—he may have come to talk to us—I do not know—he had no cause to quarrel with father—father would not quarrel with anyone—father was the nicest man in Italy—we knew no one man—we don't know anything about him."

It is probable, judging from the broken statements of the girls and the fact that Nunzio, their brother, says Bennett wanted to keep company with Maria, that Bennett had tried to get acquainted with the girls, possibly under some other name, that he had not succeeded and that he had finally tried to get the consent of the father to his wishes. That the father knew who he was and that he had no use for him is accepted as a fact. That Bennett came into the saloon frequently for his ill success, and that he used some fancied trouble with the restaurant food as a pretext for a quarrel, is borne out by the accounts of what followed.

The Calonico family hails from Abruzzi Italy. They have been prosperous and well-to-do people. Among their Italian neighbors they are held in high esteem as estimable people, hard working, frugal and self-respecting.

Hard Working and Respected.

The first member of the family to come to this country was Nunzio, the eldest son, who arrived here ten years ago when he was only ten years old. He worked hard and saved his money. Six years ago Nunzio returned to Abruzzi and brought his father back with him. Soon after they became well established here. Four years ago the mother and younger children were sent for.

After the family was united in Boston they lived on Snelling place. A few months ago they moved to the present home, No. 408 Hanover street, over De Pietro's saloon. Last month Father and son got work running De Pietro's lunch counter.

The two older girls were employed by factory and were respected among their mates as well as admired for their beauty. The girls had no regular sweethearts, so far as known.

Mrs. H. C. Woodill Dead.

Mrs. Jennie Woodill is dead, after a two years' illness, at the home of her husband, Harry C. Woodill, No. 6 Good Hope Mansion street, Melrose, aged forty. She was a member of the Melrose First Baptist church, the W. C. T. U., Auxiliary and other religious and charitable organizations. She leaves two young sons, Wendell and Harry Woodill. The funeral will be held at the home at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

HENRY SIEGEL CO.

Washington & Essex Sts., Boston. Only Strictly Fireproof Store

FREE To Charity—$4,000. Everybody is invited to vote on the charities they favor. Write for information or call at voting booth, 2d Floor.

Beginning To-morrow, Monday, January 3d, the "S.H." Green Trading Stamps to Its Customers. with news of utmost interest to thousands of p

During the present year from $75,000 to $100,000 worth of high-class useful Premiums will be distributed FREE TO OUR CUSTOMERS from the beautiful "S.H." Green Trading Stamp Parlor on the Fifth Floor.

While the Store's High Standard of Merchandise Will Be Uns

CHARACTERISTIC of the Spirited, Progressive Policy of the HENRY SIEGEL COMPANY STORE, we have decided in the future to give our customers the Famous, Original S.H. Green Trading Stamps with all purchases. This week everyone will receive FORTY (40) Stamps "FREE" to start books with.

Every day this week you will receive DOUBLE Trading Stamps on all your purchases.

In other words, TWO (2) S.H. Green Trading Stamps will be given where it has been customary elsewhere to give but one.

It is the ambition of the HENRY SIEGEL COMPANY STORE to do the Largest Business in all New England.

That ambition will surely be realized because of the Certainty that we will always supply you with the Highest possible standard of merchandise at the Lowest possible prices and for the Very Important reason that you will receive the Most Popular and, in our opinion, the Very Best of all Inducements—a share of our profits, by means of the celebrated S.H. Green Trading Stamp System. We have scrutinized its every detail. We have subjected all its forms and phases to a most exhaustive investigation and found everything to be absolutely satisfactory. Its great BIG advantage over all other systems is that no time limit is placed on S.H. Stamps, and that The Sperry and Hutchinson Company, a Million Dollar Corporation—larger than all other Trading Stamp Companies combined—are behind every S.H. Stamp. We have signed a long time contract for the use of these stamps, and confidently assure you that your S.H. Stamps will be redeemed whenever you are ready to redeem them.

The fact is, S.H. Green Trading Stamps MEAN something to you. They are like money. They come as naturally and are as important as your change. They bring you, without additional cost, Splendid Premiums; the inexhaustible variety of which is but vaguely illustrated in the border around this double-page announcement.

Furniture, China, Cut Glass, Lamps, Draperies, Bric-a-Brac, Pictures, Silverware, Traveling Requisites, Cutlery, Etc., a list too long to print here; Everything is yours, for S.H. Stamps, without your spending a penny extra. Fascinating isn't it? But to properly appreciate the magnitude and great importance of this proposition to you, you must come and see these Premiums. As warmly as cold type will convey it, we extend to you a cordial invitation to come. Come this week. They are on exhibition on the Fifth Floor of this store. There you will receive full information and also a list of labels, trade-marks, soap wrappers, tobacco tags, coupons, etc., etc., which you can also exchange for Premiums or S.H. Green Trading Stamps.

STORROW IS WARMLY GREETED AT FIVE GREAT MEETINGS

"Welfare of the People Requires a Strictly Honest Administration," He Tells Voters, "One That Will Cut Off Gift Contracts, Eliminate Graft and Save Money to Build up the City"

Candidate Tells South Boston Voters Fitzgerald Abandoned Mayor Collins' Plan to Give That District Fire Protection and Wasted Money Which Would Have Laid the Needed Mains

JAMES J. STORROW spoke at five great rallies last night. He addressed great crowds in the Citizens' Municipal League headquarters, No. 744 East Fourth street, South Boston, Ward 14; Andrew Square Hall, Ward, 16; Faneuil Hall, No. 42 Merchants exchange; Common Council Chambers, No. 19 Myrtle street, Ward 10, and Tuttle House, Savin Hill avenue, Ward 24.

The league headquarters in East Fourth street, South Boston, was crowded to the doors when Mr. Storrow arrived. He said:

"There is no doubt that the welfare of our people requires first of all that the city administration shall be strictly honest and thoroughly alive at all times to cut off gift contracts and to eliminate graft. This is only another way of saying that your Mayor and City Council should be loyal to you, instead of working for a few personal and political friends.

"The money thus saved by cutting off graft and gift contracts should be expended according to some carefully thought out, intelligent and systematic plan.

"I can give you an illustration taken from a recent South Boston experience of what I mean. South Boston has a badly built section. The assessed value of the property here is about $40,000,000. It may surprise you to know that until recently the whole of South Boston was practically dependent, as far as conflagration risk was concerned, upon a single thirty-inch main in Southampton street. A break which might occur at any time in this thirty-inch main would have rendered any attempt to stop a conflagration in South Boston practically hopeless.

"Neglected Fire Protection."

"It is true there was an old twenty-inch main laid through Dover street in 1859, but this old, corroded twenty-inch low-pressure Dover street main could not possibly supply the fire department with enough water to fight a serious conflagration.

"The late Patrick A. Collins was alive to this situation, and shortly before his untimely death signed a contract for the construction of a tunnel under Fort Point Channel at Congress street to carry two large water mains.

"That tunnel was completed under this Collins contract a few months after John F. Fitzgerald took office. All that was then necessary to give South Boston its much needed fire protection was to lay the pipes in this Collins tunnel, and make the necessary connections with the water system on each end. The cost of this would have been less than $50,000.

"Any intelligent administration, which did not have its own personal friends too much in mind, would have laid the connection of the tunnel, immediately installed the pipes.

Did John F. Fitzgerald Do This?

"Did John F. Fitzgerald do this? Not a bit of it. He let this Collins plan for the protection of South Boston go to the dogs and during his entire administration.

"Frank W. A. M. Mattice, manager of the Walworth Company of South Boston, called recently by appointment of that company, calling his attention to this fire risk and suggesting a remedy. This letter came to the attention of the Finance Commission, and I immediately sent for the writer, and on the strength of his statement in the Collins tunnel and making the necessary connections was undertaken at short time ago under the present administration, and I am happy to say has recently been completed.

Insurance is Too High.

"The cost of giving this protection to South Boston was neglected during the entire Fitzgerald administration, even though one-quarter of the money wasted by Fitzgerald on gift coal contracts would have done this work.

"But besides the curing of this condition so dangerous to South Boston, a great deal of money can probably be saved the citizens of Boston by a careful, scientific and intelligent study of the problem of fire protection.

"The biggest department store in Paris, known as the Bon Marche, which is considered to be the worst fire risk in that city, pays in insurance premiums less than one-fifth what must be paid for a building of the same kind in Boston.

"The fire laws upon our citizens is onerous.

"In the first place the entire city has to be patrolled with insurance patrols, which involves a heavy tribute to the big insurance companies.

"In the second place, even these heavy insurance premiums do not cover the whole loss. For example, if the Wilson's plant burned tomorrow the company probably would not get all the loss and from the insurance companies.

"In the next place, how about the men employed there and their families? Would they not be certain to experience serious loss and great inconvenience and perhaps suffer suffering? They would probably lose a large sum in wages for at least a fortnight, a loss of experience! And then the storekeepers here in South Boston would feel the loss to a considerable extent.

Cost Falls on Workers.

"To this fire cost must be added the $1,500,000 needed for the maintenance of the Fire Department and the loans and interest on the down payments from time to time for buying land and building new engine houses.

"I am not an insurance expert, but during my entire life there has been every few years a conflagration somewhere in Boston, and only last year fire destroyed in Boston $3,000,000 worth of property.

"Remember also that the premiums must not only cover the sums which the insurance companies are obliged to pay for losses, but all their running expenses.

"I suppose it is probably a moderate estimate to say that one-fifth of the total annual fire tax is the people of Boston is still $3 millions of dollars.

"The average mortgage may try to persuade you that this does not concern the laboring man, but only rich people.

"Well, everyone ought to know by this time that the cost of fire risk is finally upon the homes and tenement houses and stores where the laboring men live and they have to get back to them with a deadly and killing certainty.

"The same thing is true of these fire losses. The payments to the big insurance companies for fire risk is finally upon the home and also increase the cost of the running of the big department stores and other stores of the city, and find their way into the pockets of the proprietors, the price of the cotton or woolen dress your wife buys, the shoes your children wear and the food you eat.

"I believe that by following the example of Paris, and carrying out a systematic, carefully planned and fully adequate scheme for water supply and fire protection, we can greatly reduce the fire tax now bearing so heavily upon our people.

"One of the things I propose to do if elected Mayor is to take up this annual fire tax of $6,000,000, and see if by a careful and systematic plan we cannot substantially reduce it. If we can save $1,000,000 out of the $6,000,000 fire tax, it would be a sum of money larger than it costs the city for nobody, the Hospital Department, the Health Department and the Bath Department."

TIMILTY AND CURLEY SHOULD BE DEFEATED

THERE are two men in the list of candidates for the Council whose election would be a positive menace to the city of Boston. The city of Boston would not be safe with these two men in the City Council. They are:

ALDERMAN JAMES M. CURLEY.
ALDERMAN JAMES P. TIMILTY.

Alderman James M. Curley was sent to jail for two months for defrauding the United States Government by impersonating another man in a civil service examination.

Alderman James P. Timilty was discharged from the service of the city of Boston for defrauding the city of $1,000 by drawing a dead man's name on the pay rolls. There was a strong suspicion at the time he was discharged that the dead man's family did not go to the family of the deceased.

Both should be defeated.

STORROW DECLARES HE FAVORS UNIONS

IN a whirlwind automobile tour through the city, James J. Storrow spoke straight-from-the-shoulder at five big rallies and one schoolboys' banquet last night, reiterating his attacks upon John F. Fitzgerald and Fitzgerald's record. All of the audiences received the mayoralty candidate warmly and with attentiveness.

Starting from his headquarters at the Hotel Bellevue at 8 o'clock, Mr. Storrow addressed two rallies in South Boston, invaded Savin Hill, Dorchester, Elm Hill, Mattapan and Ward 18, and finally wound up with a heart-to-heart talk with the Roxbury High School class of 1910 and the American house.

In all of the halls a large crowd was eagerly waiting to hear what Storrow had to say, and he was interrupted but once at the Savin Hill rally in Putts' saloon on Savin Hill avenue.

He was attacking Fitzgerald's appointment of Michael J. Mitchell. "He had nothing to experience to qualify him for it," said Mitchell.

"Hadn't he been to Congress for five years, Mr. Storrow?" shouted a staunch Fitzgerald adherent at the top of his voice.

"No, the only experience I know he had was that of an undertaker," Storrow replied with a laugh. "I'm glad to know that there is one Fitzgerald man in Boston, so that I'll get another vote."

The interruption created some disturber and all was calm again.

In not promising anything; I'm not carrying on a promising campaign," was Storrow's reply to a question that was put by one of his audience in his rally in the Storrow headquarters in Ward 14 in South Boston. The man asked Mr. Storrow if he had accomplished anything while in South Boston, which he thought were the strong enough for the modern electric years.

"I'm not going to promise a single bridge, but I'll investigate it's need," said Mr. Storrow.

He spoke to approximately 2,000 people in the five rallies and the schoolboy luncheon. In each he dwelt upon the necessity for economy in the city administration, the letters on East Fourth street, South Boston, whereby he assures that Fitzgerald has ignored the need for better fire protection for South Boston. The two halls were well filled with men. Storrow was given a rousing cheer.

His next rally was in John Andrew Hall, Andrew square, South Boston, in Ward 16. As the Storrow machine pulled up in a crowd of 1,000 people or more shouted "Three cheers for Mr. Storrow." They were given with a lusty vim and then the whole crowd pleaded for Storrow himself. There weren't enough to go round. The hall was packed to the doors and when Storrow spoke without interruption. He declared most of his talk to be about the fight that existed between the workingman and the big man, but for the public good. His interests in Boston were by comment. It was pointed out that newly organized Chamber of Commerce had accomplished much for the whole community.

Storrow went on record even more strongly than ever before for labor unions. He believes in them unless they abuse. He didn't exist 'id go out and help form them." Storrow said he was strongly organized, not only for the benefit of the laboring man but for the public good and the entire population.

He said that Fitzgerald had accomplished was to organize a worthless advisory board, upon which would serve such business men as Storrow, Weeks and Hibbard.

Thirty-five English High School boys waited until nearly 11 o'clock to hear Storrow.

"Hello, boys," said the candidate upon reaching the banquet hall. They gave three rousing cheers for the next Mayor of Boston. Then Storrow said: "I'd be behind give them an athletic field if he were elected.

"I can't promise," said Mr. Storrow, "but I'll put it on the list."

GOOD GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION GIVES OUT VIEWS ON CANDIDATES

Storrow Endorsed for Mayor; Fitzgerald and Hibbard Sharply Criticised.

THE Good Government Association yesterday issued its usual hints to voters in the form of a long statement, in which is given the records of all the candidates for the Council and will mail a copy of this document to the voters. Its recommendations follow:

FOR MAYOR,
JAMES J. STORROW.

FOR CITY COUNCIL,

JOHN J. ATTRIDGE, MATTHEW HALE,
WALTER ALLAN LANE, THOMAS J. KENNY,
WALTER L. COLLINS, BENJAMIN C. LANE.

No recommendation is made for the School Board.

The feature of the report of the association is the strong recommendation of John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor George A. Hibbard, Alderman James M. Curley and Alderman James P. Timilty, as well as the rest of what is known as the Curley-Timilty slate for the Council. The association recommends the concentration of the votes of its friends upon the nine men to be elected, so that the votes may get the longer lists.

Plan 2, under which the election is being carried on, according to the Good Government Association, contemplates the organization of municipal parties. Plan 1 limits the abolition of all parties, which will be a surprise no doubt to many voters in Boston. In this connection the report says:

Favors Municipal Parties.

"Contrary to a somewhat popular misapprehension, Plan Two does not involve the absence of all parties in municipal politics. The Good Government Association considers the organization of municipal parties. The recently formed Citizens' Municipal League and the Republican and the so-called Timilty-Curley combination, which has resulted in the nomination of eight candidates for the City Council, may fairly be regarded as a somewhat fortuitous move in the direction of another. The connection or coalition with either of these groups is of importance, and when such a connection exists, that fact has been stated. Speaking generally, any candidate or support ed by the Citizens' Municipal League are supporters of Mr. Storrow for Mayor, and those nominated in connection with the Timilty-Curley combination are supporters of Mr. Fitzgerald."

The report of the association is signed by Laurence Minot, chairman; William G. Bunker, John Lambert, Eliot N. Perkins, George R. Nutter, executive committee; Robert J. Bottomly, secretary.

In the general discussion of the mayoralty candidates the report says:

Storrow Strongly Endorsed.

"We believe that the line has fully justified not only our estimate of Mr. Hibbard's ability and character, but the wisdom of electing him over his then opponent John F. Fitzgerald, and the wisdom of our opposition to the election of Mr. Fitzgerald as Mayor. Subsequent to the election the members of the Finance Commission make more than everything could have done to prove his absolute unfitness for the office of Mayor.

"If the choice of the voter lay solely between Mr. Storrow and Mr. Hibbard, between a man of high character, ability and character, who has shown distinguished ability as a business man and in business and public and quasi public office, a man whom Harry Nelson Atwood, Eliot N. Perkins on the one hand, and on the other hand a man who has been found wanting in character, who has broken his pledge, publicly and privately, to conduct himself as a gentleman and who labors under physical disability, the choice of the electorate would not be in doubt, but the presence in the field of other candidates who have declared that they are friend of decent government should give aid and comfort to Mr. Fitzgerald if anything for Mr. Hibbard's election is appreciative he may be of such portions of Mr. Hibbard's administration as are meeting of commendation.

"The real contest is between Mr. Storrow and Mr. Fitzgerald; between decent government and the old system of graft and inefficient government. Every citizen of Boston, entitled to vote, who fails to cast his ballot on Tuesday, January 11, 1910, for James J. Storrow for Mayor of Boston, will on record as one who believes that he desires a wasteful, inefficient and corrupt government of the city.

Records of Candidates.

All of the candidates considered are taken up in alphabetical order. A review of the record of each candidate is given and at the end an "opinion." This is the opinion rendered on Mr. Fitzgerald:

OPINION—Mr. Fitzgerald's administration as Mayor is the city's disgrace; his election was again and again approved over the infamous and misgovernment disclosed in that administration. Fair minded citizens will repudiate it again as before. We believe him to be unfit and unworthy, and will use every effort for the city's interests, save as they may be served by the election of a competent opponent. We most strongly urge his defeat.

The conclusion regarding Mayor Hibbard is summed up in this language:

OPINION—We believe that our account of his poor health necessitating frequent absences, and his facilitation of the passage of confirmatory acts of important issues, Mr. Hibbard is not a suitable candidate for the office of Mayor, with its increased demand for health, energy, persistency and good judgment. Approval or disapproval of Mr. Hibbard's administration is not the real issue in this campaign. A vote for Hibbard will be in effect a vote for Fitzgerald. We advise his defeat.

"Votes for Taylor Wasted."

After giving a brief biography of the life of Nathaniel H. Taylor, he is disposed of thus briefly:

OPINION—Running without hope of election, a vote for him will be wasted. We advise his defeat."

In recommending the election of Mr. Storrow the association says that it has investigated his connection with the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Company, and nothing was found "objectionable in any way on Mr. Storrow's integrity and good faith."

OPINION—We strongly recommend the election of Mr. Storrow.

The report then takes up the candidates for the City council. A surprising feature of the report is that three of the four men on the ticket of the Citizens' Municipal League are defeated in recommendation. These candidates are Alderman Fred J. Brand, Edward J. McDonald and Marx Stone. Of Brand this is said:

Cannot Recommend Brand.

OPINION. We have recommended his election in previous years and are sorry of him last year. He appears to have been influenced at times by petty, political and personal considerations, and has shown himself unwilling to co-operate with his associates. These characteristics have become even more marked this year. In spite of apparent natural abilities he has on the whole been a failure as a public servant. We cannot recommend his election.

This is the conclusion about McDonald:

OPINION. His record as shown by his votes is not creditable, and public service lack of appreciation or disregard of public interests. We can not recommend his election.

Of Stone the report concludes:

OPINION. Personally honest. His business record does not indicate any sufficient capacity for the City Council. We cannot recommend his election.

Alderman James M. Curley comes in for the severest criticism in the report. This is the concluding part of the statement about him:

Curley's Jail Record.

He was convicted by a jury on Sept ember 24, 1903, in the U. S. District Court of conspiracy to defraud the United States by impersonation of another man at a civil service examination. The fraud involved the signing of a false name. An appeal on technical point of law to the higher Federal Courts was decided against him, and on November 7, 1901, he was sentenced to two months in the Charles Street Jail and served his sentence. In the Board if Aldermen his bills for overages were $412.80 in 1904; $446 in 1905; $889.67 in 1906; $733.50 in 1907; $674 in 1908 and $15 in eleven months in 1909.

OPINION. Absolutely discredited as a public servant, his continued election has been a menace with a disgrace to the city. Formerly identified with the worst side of the Fitzgerald administration, he now seeks to regain power. As an active leader of the Timilty-Curley combination of Candidates for the Council, he above all others should be defeated.

Not less severe in their strictures were the Good Government men on Alderman James P. Timilty. Summing up his association there is put in this way: "Calefully politics. The they go on to say:

Timilty's Indictment.

Was indicted on December 19, 1906, for violation of the Civil Service laws in connection with having the name of a dead man on the city pay roll, as mentioned above. On December 27, 1906, he pleaded guilty and was fined $200.00. In the Board of Aldermen in 1908 his bills for carriages were $171.00 and in eleven months in 1909 were $1,000.

OPINION.—A typical ward politician. His career indicates a disregard of the law and the interests of the city. His activity as a leader of the Timilty-Curley combination of candidates for the council is an attempt to restore the discredited Fitzgerald administration. We advise his defeat.

This is the opinion registered of Alderman Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston:

OPINION—A persistent office seeker and typical ward politician. Without qualifications for the new City Council. Allied with the Timilty-Curley combination in its efforts to restore the discredited Fitzgerald administration. We advise his defeat.

"Goodwin Lacks Judgment."

The report against Frank A. Goodwin, whose attacks have been principally directed against Laurence Minot and his associates, to the effect that he "lacks sound judgment," will doubtless cause many thoughtful people to smile. This is the conclusion about Goodwin:

OPINION.—Though many of his views on the City Council are to his credit, his whole record has been erratic, and indicates a lack of sound judgment. We cannot recommend his election.

This is the report on Joseph J. Norton of South Boston:

OPINION.—A professional politician without any substantial business outside of politics, he is best known for his ability to obtain appointments for himself at City Hall. Affiliated with the Timilty-Curley combination. We advise his defeat.

A. S. Parker Weeks is jolted in this manner:

OPINION. A politician of the old school, zealous for local improvements. Not the type needed in the new City Council as a representative of the whole city. His affiliation with the Timilty-Curley combination is against him. We cannot recommend his election.

Being members of the Curley-Timilty combination, the reasons for the report is adverse to Timothy J. Buckley, James J. Byrne and Thomas J. Collins.

OH! WHAT'S THE USE?

James J. Storrow Points Out Fitzgeraldism as Pictured by Josiah Quincy.

BEFORE THE FINANCE COMMISSION—JOSIAH QUINCY UNDER OATH.

After Josiah Quincy had revealed to the Finance Commission the system under which political favorites defrauded the city of thousands of dollars in the department of supplies, he was asked why he did not try to influence Mayor Fitzgerald to change this system and protect the city treasury. He replied:

"I DID NOT THINK IT WOULD BE OF ANY USE. I DO NOT LIKE TO TRY IMPOSSIBILITIES."

Josiah Quincy knew John F. Fitzgerald's character better than any other influential politician in Boston. He knew the city was being defrauded. He knew it "wouldn't be of any use" to ask Fitzgerald to stop the frauds.

AND FITZGERALD DIDN'T.

"FITZGERALDISM!"

When Fitzgerald sought the office of Mayor of Boston in the fall of 1905, he made these solemn pledges:

"Should I be elected Mayor, if I find incompetence I will cut it out. If I find waste, I will stop it. If I find graft, I will expose the graft and jail the grafters. I will do all in my power to give the city of Boston a clean, honest administration. I will keep constantly in mind the due protection of the city treasury and an absolutely honest desire to exact a dollar's worth of value for every dollar of outlay. It will be my ambition to keep a high standard of performance constantly before me."

JOHN F. FITZGERALD DID NOT KEEP ONE OF THESE PROMISES!

The CITY TREASURY WAS PLUNDERED through "gift" contracts to favored political friends. Contractors DEFRAUDED the city of thousands of dollars by doing inferior work and selling inferior supplies at extravagant prices. MAYOR FITZGERALD'S incompetent and dishonest appointees PAID DOUBLE PRICES out OF THE CITY TREASURY for articles bought and work done. Half of this money went INTO DISHONEST MEN'S POCKETS.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD NEVER INTENDED TO KEEP THESE PROMISES.

The best evidence of his intention to PERMIT INCOMPETENCE, to WASTE THE CITY'S MONEY, to PROTECT GRAFT, to IGNORE DISHONESTY of officials, to GIVE AWAY THE CITY'S MONEY in payment of his political debts is the SWORN STATEMENT OF JOSIAH QUINCY, then and now one of John F. Fitzgerald's political advisers.

Ex-Mayor Quincy was on the witness stand before the Finance Commission when John F. Fitzgerald was mayor. He told of "leaks" in the department of supplies which spent $1,650,000 of the city's money in Fitzgerald's administration. He said he "KNEW FITZGERALD WOULD DESIRE TO BUY OF THOSE FIRMS THAT HELPED ELECT HIM." He swore that he so told the assistant purchasing agent at the beginning of Fitzgerald's term. The department of supplies took the "hint." Supplies were bought from Fitzgerald's friends at extravagant prices. THE CITY WAS CHEATED. The TAXPAYERS WERE DEFRAUDED of immense sums. The CITY TREASURY WAS PLUNDERED to pay Fitzgerald's political debts. The Finance Commission asked Josiah Quincy why he did not try to influence Fitzgerald to change this system and prevent the frauds. This is what he said:

Quincy—"There should be a change in the political system under which Boston is governed. I would like to see it out root and branch."

Finance Commission—"Why, having the opportunity you had, your acquaintance with the Mayor (Fitzgerald), and your large experience, did you not try to put that in force in the Spring of 1906?"

Quincy—"I DID NOT THINK THAT WOULD HAVE BEEN OF ANY USE. I DON'T LIKE TO TRY IMPOSSIBILITIES."

Diagnosis of Fitzgeraldism by a Doctor of Politics

Here is Josiah Quincy's own detailed expose of Fitzgeraldism as revealed by the Finance Commission's report of January 30, 1909:

"One of the chief supporters of the Mayor, himself a former Mayor of the city (Josiah Quincy), stated under oath that early in 1906 he had a number of conferences with the assistant purchasing agent of the supply department, asked the Mayor (JOHN F. FITZGERALD) to retain him, and secured for him an increase of salary. The subject of these conferences was the question of the individuals and firms from whom the largest purchases had been made under the late administration and AS TO THEIR BACKERS. The former Mayor (Josiah Quincy) suggested 'that the incoming administration (that of JOHN F. FITZGERALD) would make various changes in firms from whom supplies were purchased,' and requested information 'as to the firms and individuals from whom purchases were being made.' Further details of these conferences and their object were given by him as follows:

"I probably did suggest to him (the assistant purchasing agent) that in the purchase of ordinary supplies * * * the administration might like to have the orders go to firms which were IN SYMPATHY WITH THE ADMINISTRATION OR WHICH DID SUPPORT THE MAYOR FOR NOMINATION OR ELECTION * * * I may have suggested that IT MIGHT BE USEFUL TO FRIENDS OF THE ADMINISTRATION TO KNOW WHEN CONSIDERABLE PURCHASES WERE TO BE MADE in any particular line so that dealers in those lines might have a chance to put in an appearance and ask for orders at seasonable times. There might be some ADVANTAGE IN HAVING A CLERK ON THE INSIDE of the office who could answer inquiries and WHO WOULD LEAK a little information as to when supplies were supposed to be needed. Of course, you know that CITY HALL IS HONEYCOMBED WITH WIRES of that sort. * * *

"I knew that the MAYOR WOULD DESIRE TO RECOGNIZE THE PROPER ONES through the branches of the supply department, would want to RECOGNIZE some of the FIRMS THAT HAD BEEN INSTRUMENTAL IN HIS NOMINATION AND ELECTION, who either USED THEIR INFLUENCE by vote OR MONEY, or some way. * * *

"This witness (Josiah Quincy) who had displayed much interest in municipal problems of various kinds, further stated that, in his opinion, 'there should be a change in the political system under which Boston * * * is governed.'

"When asked, 'why, having the opportunity you had, YOUR ACQUAINTANCE WITH THE MAYOR (JOHN F. FITZGERALD), and your large experience did you not try to put that in force in the Spring of 1906?' he answered:

"'I DID NOT THINK THAT WOULD HAVE BEEN OF ANY USE. I DON'T LIKE TO TRY IMPOSSIBILITIES.'

"No truer picture could have been drawn of THE DEGRADATION INTO WHICH THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE CITY HAD FALLEN and of the unwillingness of those who could have done so to raise its standard."

The supply department spent $848,864 in 1906 and $797,080 in 1907. Less than $200,000 of this $1,643,945 was spent under competition. The prices paid were excessive; the aggregate loss to the city was very large. The city was defrauded and cheated by the purchase of inferior goods at extravagant prices.

But for such FRAUDS, the city of Boston would not have been confronted with the necessity of laying off worthy and hard-working city employes.

What Fitzgerald Promised and What He Did

In his inaugural address January 1, 1906, John F. Fitzgerald said:

"A better system of purchasing would not only make it possible to secure lower prices for the city, but would also tend to prevent wasteful or unnecessary purchases. A system of testing the materials constantly required by the several departments would result in establishing uniform standards of quality and price, and would undoubtedly save much money that is now wasted."

That is what Mayor Fitzgerald PROMISED.

This is what he DID:

Appointed a purchaser of supplies who knew nothing about buying supplies for the city. The mayor knew his lack of qualifications to superintendent the expenditure of nearly $1,000,000 a year by the city. The Finance Commission said:

"The absence of such qualifications was a necessary requirement for the head of this department if it was to be administered as a means of paying the mayor's political debts and advancing his political fortunes out of the city treasury."

The management of this department was so flagrantly extravagant that it became CRIMINAL. The head of the department, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the city, was sent to jail at Deer Island. BUT JOHN F. FITZGERALD WAS RESPONSIBLE.

Under this system:

The city was divided into sections and each section was allotted to certain political friends of the mayor, who had the privilege of selling materials to the city in their sections and receiving extravagant payments for them.

Flagstone was bought by the city at 67 cents a square foot, when a former contractor was willing to continue to sell it at 33½ cents a square foot. The city lost $14,000. For this transaction the buyer of supplies went to jail. On the witness stand, Mayor Fitzgerald "could not remember" any of the details of this deal, although it was carried out by his express permission.

Fitzgerald approved six coal contracts, amounting to $70,000, entered into without competition. In all of them the city was defrauded through the incompetency or connivance of officials. Inferior coal was substituted; false bills of lading presented; short weights accepted.

A concern, not the lowest bidder, sold 10,000 tons of coal to the city. It was inferior coal; false bills were rendered and the bills were paid. Detection could have been easy. On city coal purchases $200,000 was lost.

Forty-eight thousand barrels of cement were bought at a loss of $17,000.

On city stone-crushing $179,000 was thrown away. On four stone-crusher contracts $50,000 more was lost.

Thousands were stolen in fraudulent land deals.

$1,400,000 was spent in "gift" contracts and purchases in the supply department alone.

The foregoing are instances merely, selected from the facts in the possession of the Finance Commission. "Under his administration," said the Finance Commission, "the spoils system was developed, CONCENTRATED IN THE HANDS OF THE MAYOR, and pushed to its logical end—waste, inefficiency, corruption and fraud. The city always lost in these transactions. Many of them are in substance nothing but a conspiracy between the city officials and outside parties to use the money of the city for private and unlawful ends."

If Josiah Quincy thought it impossible to induce Fitzgerald to give the city a square, honest deal in 1906, do you think the new city charter or any other influence can do it in 1910? Can the leopard change its spots? Do you, Mr. Voter, think that the Fitzgerald who is a candidate for Mayor NOW is a different Fitzgerald from the man Josiah Quincy gave up as a hopeless case THREE YEARS AGO? Do YOU, Mr. TAXPAYER, want to take that chance with YOUR pocketbook? Do YOU want to let John F. Fitzgerald have his hands on the $100,000,000 the city treasury will spend in the next four years?

STORROWISM

In three years, James J. Storrow, as Chairman of the School Committee, spent $10,500,000 of the people's money on Boston schools. Not a dollar was wasted or stolen.

In three years under James J. Storrow, EVERY School Committee contract of more than $2,000 was awarded after advertisement and competition. There were NO "gift" contracts.

FITZGERALDISM

In two years, John F. Fitzgerald, as Mayor, spent $40,000,000 of the people's money on city government. Hundreds of thousands of dollars was wasted or stolen.

In two years, under John F. Fitzgerald, MORE THAN HALF of the city contracts of more than $2,000 were awarded WITHOUT advertisement or competition. "Gift" contracts were the rule. In five departments alone $1,900,000 was wasted.

Seriously, Mr. Voter, Haven't You Made Up Your Mind to be Honest With YOURSELF and Vote for JAMES J. STORROW for Mayor?

FITZGERALD MAKES ROUSING SPEECHES IN WHIRL OF RALLIES

Candidate at Big Dudley Street Opera House Meeting Accuses Storrow Banking House of Aiding New Haven Railroad's Scheme to Wrest Control of the Boston & Maine Road

Demands Reply to Specific Charges of Aiding Merger and Attempting to Defeat Public Opinion; Again Scores Opponent in Fruit Company and Standard of Business Honesty

EX-MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD and his corps of campaign orators addressed four enthusiastic rallies in South Boston and Roxbury last evening.

At the closing rally of the evening held at the Dudley street Opera House, he addressed his largest audience, and the ex-Mayor's address was a direct answer to every charge that has been made against him in which he charged that Storrow was closely identified with the largest public service corporation in New England and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Packed houses greeted the speakers at Somerset hall, Ward 14; at Chan-na-Gael Hall, Ward 13, and at the Democratic headquarters, Hampshire and Whittier street, Roxbury. At these rallies Fitzgerald charged that Storrow had neglected to educate the people of Massachusetts, had invested his money in Western financial propositions and was now attempting the use of a peculiarly intimate and objectionable character, if the people should elect the head of the trust farce by this method they will clearly see Mr. Storrow's undue stress to hold the office of Mayor; they propose he enlighten them.

"I do not intend to trace any general issue in regard to the past administration of the policy, now finally adopted by the Legislature of this year, of authorizing the public control of the Boston & Maine Railroad by the New Haven Railroad, through the medium of the New England Railroad Holding Company; but I do propose to raise the question of the active connection of Mr. Storrow, as a partner in his banking firm, with the plan adopted by the New Haven Railroad prior to the granting of any legislative authority whatever, if not illegal, does not show that his standards of action are such, even more than the citizen Boston at large, as much as to recommend him to the confidence of the citizens of Boston?

Blames Storrow Firm.

"It will be recalled that the action of the New Haven Railroad, first in acquiring a large block of the stock of the Boston & Maine railroad in exchange for its own stock, and then in endeavoring to influence the holdings of other large interests, in order to secure effective control of that company, gave rise in two General Courts of the Boston & Maine to acute legislative contests ever seen in the State.

"The fact must not be forgotten or overlooked at the present time that the original block of stock which caused all of this trouble was controlled and dominated by Mr. Storrow's firm, Lee, Higginson & Co., was offered by them to the New Haven Railroad.

"There was a very general demand from the people, and the public in the Spring of 1909 in which, if I am not mistaken, the Chamber of Commerce participated, that petition towards such consideration should at least be given that public opinion could arrive at an intelligent opinion in regard to the public policies involved.

"In line with this the Legislature, after long wrestling with the subject, finally passed Chapter 485 of the Acts of 1909, approved on June 28, entitled 'An Act to Restrain the Consolidation of Railroad Companies.'

"Section 1 of this act provided, under general orders, that neither the New Haven Railroad 'nor any person or corporation acting in its interests shall directly or indirectly acquire or attempt to acquire by purchase, exchange of stock or in any other way any shares of the capital stock' of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

"Section 2 of this act provided, under general terms, that if the New Haven Railroad violated the provision it would be subject to a fine of $1,000 for each offence, and further that 'the partnership, trustee or any person who procured, aided or abetted any such violation should be punished by a fine of $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both six months, or by both fine and imprisonment.'

Says Law Was Ignored.

"I now charge that Mr. Storrow's banking firm, including, of course, Mr. Storrow himself as one of the members, was actively engaged, right up to the time when this act became a law, in trying to nullify its purpose and thwart legislative action and make it as difficult as possible for it in continuing to solicit and effect exchanges of shares of the Boston & Maine Railroad for shares of the New Haven Railroad. They confined to do this, well knowing that the press and public opinion, including that of the business community, strongly favored by many of his present supporters, demanded legislative action that should end question of consolidation or joint management could be intelligently studied and that the Legislature was properly equipped to enact a law securing such reasonable delay.

"I charge that in this matter Mr. Storrow's firm was deliberately and knowingly working against the public interests by endeavoring to see how many shares of such stock it could secure before the time for the Legislature could study and finally act upon the question of the public policies which I have mentioned.

"I charge that this unconscionable work was completed after the bill, the substance which became a law, had been introduced and reported and after the Legislature had practically made up its mind to pass the bill. I charge that Mr. Storrow referred to was the strongest reasons to believe that the Legislature would pass the bill and that it was very nearly the last measure passed by the Legislature of 1909.

Defiance of Public Policy.

"I charge that this was done by Mr. Storrow's firm in defiance of sound public policy and in spite of the fact that the purpose of placing more dollars in the pockets of himself and his partners.

"I charge that they did this work as agents or representatives of the New Haven Railroad, and that they were paid a commission for doing it, based upon the number of shares they secured. In short, they were working for their own profit and at the time, regardless of the public interest and welfare, they did not technically violate the terms of the act only because its passage was postponed until they could complete their undertaking without such a violation.

"I charge Mr. Storrow thus far declines to hold himself personally responsible in the duty of his actions as a director, he has at least shown proper sensitiveness to charges that he himself profited personally by any of the larger transactions. He gave an account of his dealings with the United States Steel Corporation, to the extent of his admitting that through his firm he had been a sharer in underwriting profits of commissions to the amount of $34,000 made through contracts between his firm and the company of which he was a director.

"The matter which I now make a pending of vastly more interest and concern to the public than the transactions of any banking corporation, and I call upon Mr. Storrow to make as equally frank statement in this case of his personal profits. I also ask specific questions.

Asks Specific Questions.

"(1.) Did not your firm in the year 1907 act as the agent of the New Haven Railroad in the acquisition of the Boston & Maine Railroad in exchange for New Haven Railroad stock, and did it not receive a commission or profit for conducting this service?

"(2.) Did not your firm through its partners secure the financial district to secure additional stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad Company for such exchange up to June 28, 1909, when the act was finally passed forbidding such exchange under heavy penalties?

"(3.) If your firm had done on June 29 what it did up to June 28 in this matter, would not your partners have been liable subject to the penalty of fine or imprisonment or both under the act?

"(4.) Is it your idea of good citizenship and does it meet with your ideals of standards, to try to thwart for personal gain, an important policy in your adopted State by the Legislature of the Commonwealth?

"(5.) Did not your firm receive a commission for this service both from the New Haven Railroad from the holders of stock in the Boston & Maine delivered in exchange, and has not your firm solicited commissions amount to and what was your commission share in them?

"(6.) In answer to these questions by Mr. Storrow will, I think, throw some interesting light upon the superior qualifications which he claims for himself for the position of personal governor. They will show how far in this particular instance he followed his self-styled guide to stand in the way of public policy which commanded legislative approval.

No Credit, Only Discredit.

"Mr. Storrow, in his speech yesterday noontime, made use of this language: 'No Publicity Bureau No Old Home Week with $25,000 Appropriation Will Attract Any Next day, no cheap method of advertising attracts the serious man looking for a business opportunity or industry.'

"This sentiment of Mr. Storrow's, carefully analyzed, does not reveal the character of the man. He is not willing to give the credit where it is due to our people for the good things done under my administration, which has cards me the utmost discredit for the weaknesses not alone under my administration, but under that of administrations.

"The Publicity Bureau was established under me because the Chamber of Commerce, of which Mr. Storrow was a member, was not doing the work that such a body was organized to do, and which was being done in every city in the United States but Boston. As I said repeatedly in the course of the campaign, I was not only compelled to manage the affairs of the municipality and to promote the welfare of the city from the lethargy into which they had fallen in commercial and industrial affairs.

"Mr. Storrow was responsible for this situation more than anyone else in this city, and I regard him especially because he was vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, the supposedly most prominent of business organizations in this part of the country, and an active partner in one of the most leading banking houses of New England, to organize a movement to increase Boston's commerce and to promote new industries in the city.

"To make Mr. Storrow's responsibility clear to every citizen in the city I quote from his address of last Monday night, when in speaking of the railroad facilities of Boston, he gave utterance to the following language: 'We are twenty-five years behind in our railroad facilities. If a Boston merchant has fifteen boxes of freight to ship to fifteen different railroad terminals he may have to send a team to fifteen different freight houses located in different parts of the city. He must, moreover, no matter how far a merchant's place of business may be from a particular freight house, where to-day merchandise is accepted for shipment to say Bangor, Me., or some other point, get the merchant's team across to the nearest freight station, but must drive clear across the city to accomplish the sorting of the merchandise, which, under the best system of transportation, is done by the railroads.'

"Who is responsible for this situation if not Mr. Storrow? Why should not a merchant's team, almost unavailable in the congested district of the North End, be driven directly nearer to the Atlantic Avenue docks? Why should not the freight for Boston, South Boston and Dorchester, with the railroad cannon ball for Maine, or some other point, get the merchant's team across to the nearest freight station, but must drive clear across the city to accomplish the sorting of the merchandise, which, under the best system of transportation, is done by the railroads.

"Who is responsible for this situation if not Mr. Storrow? Why should not a merchant's team, almost unavailable in the congested district of the North End, be driven directly nearer to the Atlantic Avenue docks? Why should not the freight for Boston, South Boston and Dorchester, with the railroad cannon ball for Maine, or some other point, get the merchant's team across to the nearest freight station, but must drive clear across the city to accomplish the sorting of the merchandise, which, under the best system of transportation, is done by the railroads.

Send Capital from Boston.

"Would Boston's commercial and industrial situation be improved in the event Mr. Storrow's plan, as the public now know you have described it you and your associates had devoted your energies to the development of the city of Boston instead of the development of other sections of the country.

"Mr. Storrow, you are a director in thirty corporations, hardly one of which employs a dollar's worth of labor in this city. You are a director in corporations which do business in Porto Rico, Houston, Dallas, Seattle, Spokane, Yucatan, Utah, Montana, California, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, Mexico and Canada. You not only have invested your own personal funds, largely raised in this part of the country, as well as millions more of the people's savings invested in banks either directly or indirectly under your control.

"Is it because in the organization and management of these corporations your self and your associates have been able to make millions by various forms of underwriting and the handling of securities, little or nothing? The same amount as you have invested in the development of the country would have employed ten times the number of men.

"There is one concern alone in Boston which has raised $10,000,000 of dollars of capital raised in this part of the country for the development and management of corporations in other parts of the United States, and Mexico. The firm of which Mr. Storrow is a member has raised over $500,000,000, during the last twenty-five years for various enterprises away from Boston.

Fruit Company Circular.

"While I do not claim that all this money should be expended in Boston, I do say that a man who was really interested in Boston would have found many outlets for his opportunities as Mr. Storrow, who assumed the responsibility that went with the office of Vice-President of the Chamber of Commerce, should have done many years ago in Boston's growth and development, so that the condition which he portrays in his speech would not now exist. I have quoted would not now exist. I have quoted from a circular of one of these companies of which Mr. Storrow is a director.

"A few years ago the United Fruit Company was organized, capital $20,000,000. Nipe Bay Corporation. A large number of the stockholders of the United Fruit Company objected to the purchase price recommended by the executive board by Lee, Higginson & Company and presented in writing by Mr. Storrow. (I will not go into the question of the propriety of this purchase, but I will cite one paragraph from the circular.)

"Your circular is divided into eighteen paragraphs and the first one seems to be called to the statement made in paragraph three, that the earnings of the Nipe Bay Company for the year 1903 that the 130,000 acres of land controlled by the company will be under conservative valuation at least $1,250,000.'

"It would seem that Mr. Storrow settled authority that four years prior to 1907, the property consisting of 130,000 acres, was purchased in the interest of the Nipe Bay Corporation for the sum of $350,000—approximately $2 an acre.

Quotes Financial News.

"To show what a good proposition this United Fruit company has been to Mr. Storrow and his associates, I quote from these insiders make money I quote the Boston Financial News, as follows:

"'With an increase in capital stock from $21,250,000 in 1904 to $61,250,000 in 1906, the earnings on the stock have increased from 4 per cent. to 8 per cent. in the same period. Or, in other words, the net earnings have made a gain in $1,832,000 in 1901 to $3,306,887, in 1906, the latter being well in excess of the earnings of the Steel Trust.

"The people of the country wonder why the price of everything they use is increasing, and already there is talk of a general investigation. The people of Boston could examine some of the reports of the corporations of which Mr. Storrow is a director and get information further to find the reasons why some prices are increasing.

"The United Fruit Company, from which the people of Boston have received little or a surplus of $12,000,000 now, though it divided millions of dollars in dividends. Where did this money come from if not out of the pockets of the people of the country? Was the enormous profits due to because of the high prices charged for fruit, produced at the plantations of the United Fruit Company, making an additional tax on the people of this land.

Would Buy City Hall.

"If a boy going along the street takes a banana or an orange from a fruit stand, it is a police matter, and he is sent to a reformatory. Mr. Storrow's company, through its manufacturing interests, could sell oranges and sugar, and by giving away the bananas could secure the fruit profits to charitable enterprises, they become philanthropists and statues are erected to them, and honorary degrees are sent.

"Now Mr. Storrow seeks to purchase his way into the City Hall by the money gained in this way. I mistake the temper of the people if they will not put a federal candidate for public office in the highest office in the city.

SPEAKERS FOR HIBBARD.

Mayor's Campaign Opens with a Bang Tomorrow Night.

Mayor Hibbard's manager last night announced the list of speakers who will be in a stump tour to-morrow night to urge his re-election. It was announced that Mayor had delayed his speechmaking campaign because he thought that others would have been "talked to death." Henry V. Cahill, assistant district attorney, is slated to be the chief speaker. Others will be ex-school committeeman Isaac Litt, Jesse M. Gaston, ex-Representative William H. Willcutt of Ward 24, Councilman Frank H. Cahill of Ward 10, Councilman Frank B. crane of Ward 24, Sanford Bates, Leander L. Mathews and W. F. Dineen.

Meetings will be held at the following places: Hancock Hall, Hancock street, Dorchester; Tuesday, Washington Hall, Bay State road; Tuesday evening; Wednesday, Huntington Chambers Hall, Huntington avenue; Wednesday evening; Ward 18; Thursday, Knights of Honor Hall, Ward 25; Friday, Meridian Hall, Ward 22; Saturday evening, Roxbury Hall; evening, Town Hall, Brighton.

Candidates at Germantown.

The Germantown Citizens' Association will meet this afternoon in St. Paul's Hall, Germantown. In case of overflow, Saunders's Hall will be occupied. Addresses will be made by ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Nathaniel H. Taylor, James M. Curley, Mark Stone, A. S. Parker Weeks, Frederic J. Brandi, Thomas J. Giblin, Thomas J. Kenny and Mrs. Julia E. Duff. All candidates have been invited to speak. Mayor Hibbard and James J. Storrow will be represented.

SOUTH BOSTON AND ROXBURY CHEER FITZGERALD

Former Mayor Assails B. J. Rothwell in a Stirring Address.

FORMER MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD spoke at rallies last night in South Boston and Roxbury. He was greeted by large and enthusiastic gatherings. In his speeches he attacked James J. Storrow and the combined interests and corporations. He also paid his respects to Bernard J. Rothwell, Nathan Matthews and the Finance Commission.

Fitzgerald spoke last night after he started from the Young's Hotel. He was scheduled to leave there at 7.15, but didn't get away until 8 o'clock. His first stop was at the rooms of the South Boston Athletic Association at the corner of D and Broadway and Emerson street, here he was greeted by cheering voters.

The next stop was at Chan-Na-Gael Hall on E street, where he addressed 400 men.

People Are Roused.

"The people of Boston have got together," he said, "realizing that this is a contest for Mayor between a plain representative of the people with brains and a man of money. The people are roused as never before. They are conversant with the fact that the prices of foodstuffs and coal are very high. My only crime was in giving one week's work. The only crime the Finance Commission found against me.

The next stop was at the quarters of Ward 9. The other speakers were: "Jim" Donnelly, Dr. W. F. Brown of Ward 17 and "Jim" Buckley of Charlestown. A large crowd, which numbered 150, gave Fitzgerald an enthusiastic welcome.

"I always found good friends in this section," said Fitzgerald. "I then launched into an attack on Bernard J. Rothwell and his business methods.

"Rothwell believes in pure government," he said, "but he does not believe in pure food."

Jerry accused Mr. Rothwell of selling bleached flour. He defended the Old Home Week celebration, held during his administration. "One newspaper in Boston came out against that celebration," he said, "and Bernard J. Rothwell took it up because the dry goods stores, in which he got no business on account of the parade."

Watson Raps Donovan.

At the Dudley Street Opera House he found 4,000 voters waiting for him. Here he made his appearance on the stage he was roundly cheered. The audience was made up of citizens of Wards 7, 12, 13, 19 and 21. J. Frank O'Hare of South Boston and other prominent men in the City Council on the Curley-Tinlity slate presided.

"Jerry" Watson then followed Fitzgerald and paid his respects to "Jim" Donovan.

"I am ready to make affidavit to Dismiss Clerk Pelletier that 'Jimmy' Donovan gave me $75 to work for Storrow," said Watson. "Donovan also told me that I could have that amount per week to work for Storrow, keeping the check."

NEWS NOTES OF NO-PARTY POLITICS

Quotes Financial News.

Jerry Callahan says that Nat Taylor is running for exercise and that his slogan should be, "Vote for the athletic candidate."

Ex-Assistant District Attorney Felix McBride will take the stump for Fitzgerald the coming week. He will lend oratorical aid to the ex-Mayor's candidacy in Ward 10.

"I am the candidate of the poor people," says this ardent candidate for Mayor of City Council. Then he puts on his $3.50 fur overcoat and marches out of the hall, and the people laugh.

Candidate Taylor will add another room to his campaign headquarters in the old Herald building. "We've got to move a little faster," says P. Edwin Duffee, association manager.

All the candidates on the Curley-Tinlity alphabetic slate will address the members of the Young Men's Democratic club of Ward 20 at the headquarters on Bowdoin street this afternoon. Candidate Fitzgerald will speak.

"I look for Fitzgerald's vote in Charlestown to be increased," said Joe Lee. "I personally carry him through to victory," says Joseph Dick Field. "He will carry Ward 20 with a clear advantage of over 1,500 votes," declares Jerry Callahan. "We have got to win and we will win. We have $40,000 more of sewer work awaiting funds. We have children housed in unfit school buildings. We have got the interests I am pledged to, the best voting interests in the ward."

DRAW POSITION ON BALLOT.

Turn of the Tub Decides Place for Candidates.

Upon the turn of a box may depend the success or failure of a number of candidates for the City Council to be voted for at the election on December 11. The election commissioners will hold the drawing for places on the ballot at the aldermanic rooms at noon on Tuesday. He first on the ballot most mean hundreds of votes for the fortunate candidate that lands the place. Hitherto the order upon the ballot has been determined by the alphabetical order of names.

At the drawing to-morrow the names of candidates will be placed in a blank envelope and will be deposited in the box, which will be given a whirl and the first name drawn from the box heads the list. The drawing will continue until the nineteen positions for the councilors have been drawn. The drawing for the candidates for Mayor will come first, but there is little interest in the drawing for the election of the mayoralty candidates means little.

FITZGERALD'S SCHEDULE.

Two Faneuil Hall Meetings and Whirlwind Friday Night.

John F. Fitzgerald will start the week with another big Faneuil Hall rally to-morrow night and will end it with another at the Tremont Temple Saturday evening. Mr. Fitzgerald so likes the success which he has had in Faneuil Hall meetings that he has taken it for another Saturday night.

Friday night he does his famous whirlwind stunt again, covering every city ward, speaking especially to his organization workers. He will make his usual swing around the circle on the night before election.

The schedule for Friday night calls for ten meetings and thirty talks, while every other night the program makes from six to fifteen engagements imperative.

The rallies for to-morrow are at Faneuil Hall, Warren Hall, Brighton; Mutton Hall, Forest Hills, Ward 23a.

HIBBARD SCOFFS AT G. G. A.'S 'GUARDIAN ANGEL' ADVICE

MAYOR Hibbard, upon learning of the rejection of his candidacy by the Good Government Association last night, issued a caustic statement in which he refers to the reform organization as a "body of professional guardian angels" and declares that on the very day that Storrow was nominated by a "mock convention," the pamphlet criticising himself and other municipal leaders was mapped out.

"Save for my voice, I am in excellent physical condition," says the Mayor, "and if either of my opponents had lost their voices before the campaign they would be stronger than they are to-day."

Laurence Minot, president of the Good Government Association, is handed this verdict: "Nothing among the many years as a gentleman who, at the beginning of my administration, I designated as acting head of the municipal printing plant. The conclusions which he draws in this document with reference to myself are almost on a par with his administration of the plant at the present time mentioned."

Another Rap at Minot.

Again referring to Minot, who is a director of the Park Square Trust, the Mayor says: "I do not think that the gentlemen who tried to unload Park square on the city through my office believes that I was vacillating. They have given evidence to the contrary when they turned about and organized the trust themselves."

The Mayor believes that the association has set out to overwhelm his election as Storrow, and commenting upon this he says:

"In order to accomplish his election the association must prove the present Mayor a Hibbard. It is impossible to cast any reflections on either his honesty or intelligence, but they will succeed by simply ignoring him we may be able to accomplish his defeat. One official explained to me his retirement will be that the state of his health does not fit him to run."

Hits at "Guardian Angels."

In reconciling the statement Mayor Hibbard says:

"The finding of the association is just what I anticipated. It was impossible that it should be otherwise, for the organization was organized originally for the sole purpose when the proposed plan of promoting just such a candidacy as Storrow's.

"Boston is all right. Her citizens, intelligent and capable, can be trusted to do the right thing with the services of a body of professional guardian angels. They are not deceived by the false reasons which the best citizens perpetrated on the city government of Boston, and particularly into the South Station deal.

"The people understand the debt burdens imposed by the almost criminal practices which have obliged them to land at public expense.

"Conditions in the past have been done at the expense of the great suburban communities which I have been trying to lead. We have already 400 miles of unaccepted streets in Boston. We have a city bound by properly construct. We have hundreds of miles of alleys which should be taken care of. We have $40,000,000 of sewer work awaiting funds. We have children housed in unfit school buildings. These are among the interests I am pledged to, the best voting interests in the ward.

FITZGERALDISM

As a member of the first Finance Commission, chosen to serve upon that body by the Central Labor Union of Boston, I feel that I am more competent than any advertising man of Mr. Storrow's to tell the people of Boston about the real spirit of the Commission.

Space prevents me from going into details as to all the charges against Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald which are being so ingeniously set forth by Mr. Storrow. But the following brief statement is enough to illustrate the real object which a majority of the members of the Finance Commission always kept in view.

Mr. Koch, a clerk in the Supply Department of the City of Boston under Mayors Hart, Collins and Fitzgerald, formerly a clerk in the Purchasing Department of the New Haven Railroad, told me the following story soon after the date of the incident described. These were about his words:

"When I was sick in the Hospital and was expected to die, Mr. J. Wells Farley (Secretary and Assistant Counsel of the Finance Commission) came to see me.

"In spite of the desperate condition I was in, he kept pressing me to tell him something on Mayor Fitzgerald. 'Tell me all you know,' he said.

"'I can't tell you anything against him,' I answered, 'because I know nothing against him.'

"But he kept on urging me, 'Tell me something that we can use. We must get him by hook or crook.'

"That was the whole trend of his interview."

After Mr. Koch had told me this story I remonstrated, as a member of the Commission, with the Chairman, Nathan Matthews, against an official of the Commission employing such barbarous and unscrupulous tactics to force some statement from a man who was supposed to be dying; his only reply to me was, "the end justifies the means."

This is one illustration of the spirit which influenced the majority of the Commission and its officials. As the investigation was conducted it was evident to me that its main object was to break down Mayor Fitzgerald in his candidacy for re-election, and subsequently to drive him out of public life. Any fair-minded man can readily see that the majority report of the Commission is a cleverly worded document, got up at public expense mainly for this purpose.

I worked loyally with the other members of the Commission to improve the government of Boston; but such facts as the above compelled me to submit a minority report, in which I state as the truth—"that it had been the fixed purpose and policy of my colleagues to direct the great powers of the Commission chiefly to the discrediting of the administration of Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald."

As the Central Labor Union owed its representation on the Commission wholly to the action of Mayor Fitzgerald, I could not in decency avoid making this formal protest in my minority report.

Having been all through the investigations of the Finance Commission, I now state to the people of Boston my belief that John F. Fitzgerald was and is an honest man; that is why I sign my name to this advertisement.

I am earnestly supporting his present candidacy for re-election, and I believe that all fair-minded citizens should do the same.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

TAYLOR DECLARES MITCHELL MARTYR

That former city purchasing agent, Michael J. Mitchell, who served time at Deer Island for conspiracy to defraud the city, was himself the victim of a conspiracy and that he suffered because he would not turn informer, was the emphatic statement made by Nathaniel H. Taylor, the mayoralty candidate, at a rally before the Putnam Athletic Club, No. 122 Main street, Charlestown, last night.

"You have heard much about the Mitchell case," said Mr. Taylor. "Now I want to say something about it. I went to school with Mr. Mitchell. I was always his friend. When he was arrested I went over to the district attorney to tell him of my high regard for Mr. Mitchell.

"I told the District Attorney then that I believed Mr. Mitchell was the victim of a conspiracy and that he had to suffer because he would not turn informer. I expressed to the District Attorney my belief in the innocence of the man whom I had always considered as a friend. He was a true son of Charlestown. He suffered more than any one can tell.

Mr. Taylor declared he was a factor in the mayoralty race and that it was up to the voters of the district to support him, as he was the only Democratic candidate in the field.

O'CONNELL IN BITTER ATTACK ON STORROW

Speaking for Mr. Fitzgerald in Clan-na-Gael Hall, South Boston, last night, Congressman Joseph P. O'Connell was very bitter against Mr. Storrow and his whole sale charges against Mr. Fitzgerald. "One charges," he said, "once more advanced without a shred of proof."

"As an fair-minded man," he said "believe that men like John R. Morse, Arthur D. Hill, Michael J. Sughrue, Nathan Matthews and all the big, broad men of the Finance Commission could not do crimes it crimes had been committed by John F. Fitzgerald, and after they spent over $100,000 of the city's money to the last effort to do so?

"Inasmuch as Storrow has utterly failed to move a single charge he should with draw them. His methods in this campaign are unworthy of a man seeking the office of Mayor. He has dipped into the gutter.

"The reputation for fair play and equal justice enjoyed by the people of Boston will continue only where a man long and so grossly abused as has Mr. Fitzgerald by the reiteration of unfounded charges, he should be and I am confident will be awarded an overwhelming victory for his acquittal by the people of his native city."

HIBBARD COULD NOT TALK TO MERCHANTS

"Unable to Speak Above Whisper," He Tells Produce Men at Annual Meeting.

The Boston Fruit & Produce Exchange began the New Year yesterday by holding its annual election of officers, at which the following were elected: President, Arthur Cummings; vice-president, Thomas E. Smith; treasurer, Harvey E. Newport; directors, Charles L. Eustis, Harry F. Gerrish, George E. Martin, Edwin F. Wilson; delegate to State Board of Trade, George W. Mower.

It was voted to omit the banquet at the annual dinner. On the question of the annual address, it was voted to allow Public Speaker Reed

Mayor Hibbard, United States Senator Frothingham, Superintendent of Public Buildings George W. Morrison and Sealer of Weights and Measures Charles H. Woodbury and others were here as guests.

When Mayor Hibbard entered the Exchange he was asked by one of the members if he would like to address the members. The Mayor is quoted by those nearest as replying:

"I can't. My voice went back on me some three days and I am unable to speak above a whisper. I am sorry, but Fitzgerald and Richmond are not going to have it their own way this year. It will be better of today.

At 11 o'clock Mayor Hibbard was escorted to the office of the newly elected president, Arthur Cummings, who presided over the meeting. Mayor Hibbard was asked to address the meeting, but he declined to speak, and he and Mr. Cummings had a talk behind closed doors.

BUSY WEEK FOR STORROW.

Five Rallies Scheduled for Candidate Tomorrow.

James J. Storrow's managers have certainly mapped out a strenuous week for him if the progress of Isaac's last speech. Five rallies are scheduled, as follows: Ward 1, Boulevard, 4111; Ward 4, Congress Hall; Ward 15, Court House; Ward 20, Jefferson Club; Ward 24, Library Building in Codman square. There will be in addition a monthly party at Storrow headquarters, 4 Ferdinand street, corner of Allen, on Wednesday afternoon, corner of Arch street, South Boston.

Health Cranks and Food Faddists

Have Evolved Some Strange and Wonderful Theories Concerning Stomach Treatment.

A Trial Package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Sent Free.

Within the last 20 years there has sprung up a distinct class of theorists by the score to cater to the whims of fools and the ignorant. This should not, and should avoid. With the tremendous increase in nervousness and stomach weakness which are caused by the strenuous life of this month neurasthenic age in which we live, we are constantly having our attention called to some food fanatic's "new idea" on the subject of alimentation.

Most prominent among these theorists is the vegetarian, who insists that meat was never intended for the human stomach, despite the fact that his ancestors for 6,000 years or more used it as their principal article of diet, and the old patriarchs of Biblical History, who lived to prodigious old ages, were meat eaters. All of the great nations of history have been users of meat, and all of the most powerful and advanced countries of today combine it extensively in their dietaries, and their superior development and high degree of civilization are in strong and striking contrast to the decadent and degenerate nations of Asia and all the countries whose inhabitants are vegetarians.

Another fallacy which has lately become a fad is the so-called "no protein" diet, which is the foods which are rich in proteids are the ones which build up nerve, brain, muscle and blood, so that any great reduction in the amount of proteid used simply means semi-starvation for the most important centres of the system—the ones on which we depend the most to enable us to successfully fight the battles of life. Those nations whose people use foods containing but little proteid are never of large frame or well built. The Japanese, who have always been small of stature, have since adopting a more liberal proteid diet shown a remarkable increase in size, vigor and general development, and it is only since Japan became a meat eating nation that it has developed into a world-power.

Still another theory lately advanced is that sugar, pepper and salt are gastric irritants and irritate the mucous membrane of the stomach, although it is known that sugar possesses a high caloric value, while pepper and salt assist digestion rather than interfere with it, as is claimed.

The no-breakfast plan, the two-meal per day, and even the one meal daily has been advocated, while some advise a two or three weeks' fast, during which all food is withheld from the stomach "to give it a rest," completely ignoring the fact that the system's tissues are being constantly torn down and cast off, and new material to rebuild them must be supplied from the food.

It is utter nonsense to concern one's self about all these absurd and illogical theories, as life is entirely too short, and there are other things requiring our attention. Eat what you want when you want it, and as much as the system needs to replenish its waste, and then take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and forget all about food fads and stomach troubles. They digest all kinds of food so thoroughly you won't know you have a stomach. They are powerful digestors of every kind of food, though harmless to the system, and may be taken at any time and in any quantity. Get a box from your druggist for 50 cents and send us your name and address for free sample. Address, F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall Michigan.

FITZGERALD'S RECORD UPON WHICH HE SEEKS ELECTION AS MAYOR

John F. McDonald, Chairman of Campaign Committee, Gives Ten Reasons Why Voters Should Cast Their Ballots for Ex-Mayor.

EX-MAYOR FITZGERALD, in a speech on Friday evening, said that the newspapers of Boston were not treating him fairly and that many of the important statements which he made in his speeches were not published at all. For this purpose of letting the readers of the American know exactly what the ex-Mayor has stated [illegible] the important [illegible] says in addition to [illegible] John F. McDonald, chairman [illegible] Committee, [illegible] Mr. Fitzgerald [illegible] Mr. McDonald's statement to the American

By John F. McDonald.

Chairman Fitzgerald Campaign Committee.

AMID all the missiles of abuse, hurled at ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, which like the arrows of Xerxes at Thermopylae, have darkened the skies, citizens of Boston will not forget that Mr. Fitzgerald has spent many years of a very active career in public life. They will not forget that he has a public record fixed and unalterable in the public documents which cannot be changed to suit friend or foe.

Mr. Fitzgerald has done things. He has set votes as a member of one or other branch of the City Council. He has been Mayor of the city, state and nation. Those votes are recorded. Those years are a greater period of his manhood years. It is public history that long public record and then pass judgment upon the man.

Abuse is not argument and will never do duty for facts. Mr. Fitzgerald's enemies have scrutinized his record, crowded with the activities of an energetic man, and they have found nothing in it [illegible] is wrong.

Mr. Fitzgerald stands upon that record. He allows no part of it to be bad. But if it is good he want the public to look at the good to be recognized. That two wrongs will dare to repair the abuse which is now being heaped upon him.

While Mayor of Boston these are some of the things which he did or helped to do.

"Saved the City $800,000 in Two Years."

1. For the ten years showing increase, prior to his administration, the average yearly increase in the city debt amounted to about $4,200,000. During Mr. Fitzgerald's administration the average increase was but about $1,800,000.

2. Mr. Fitzgerald was the first mayor to refrain from appropriating the full amount of money permitted by law to meet the city expenses, thus saving the city about $800,000 in two years.

3. Mr. Fitzgerald was the first mayor to secure [illegible] which provide corporations a portion of the cost of the reconstruction of the [illegible] In 1905 Boston thus secured [illegible] and the corporations [illegible] more than $100,000.

4. Mr. Fitzgerald secured for Boston a change in the law by which she had been assessed for her water supply upon the [illegible] and not upon both valuation and water consumption, which was the basis of taxation in the other cities of the metropolitan district, and by which, as usual, Boston had been made to pay more than her share of the metropolitan water expenses. By this move Boston was saved about $150,000 a year.

5. Mr. Fitzgerald secured the repeal of the law permitting Boston to borrow money to pay sinking fund and interest requirements. For the six years prior to his administration Boston borrowed nearly $2,000,000 to pay interest and sinking fund charges.

6. Mr. Fitzgerald was the first mayor in thirty years to oppose every attempt at the State House to borrow money outside the debt limit for special improvements.

"Reduced Tax Rate 10 Cents a Thousand."

7. Mr. Fitzgerald secured $250,000 from the national government for a sale of a part of Deer Island, which other administrations were willing to have given away.

8. Mr. Fitzgerald [illegible] company amounting to thousands of dollars a [illegible] running for seven years, but failed to [illegible] several years ago, but failed to [illegible] 9. Mr. Fitzgerald reduced the tax [illegible] was accomplished [illegible] tax [illegible] reduced by 50 per cent.

10. Mr. Fitzgerald was the first [illegible] charter in 1885 to reduce the actual running expenses of the city below the figures of the preceding administration.

These are some, but not all, of the facts concerning Mr. Fitzgerald's administration. More will come, not only as a part of his public record as mayor, but as a member of the Massachusetts Senate and of the National Congress.

Mr. Fitzgerald's friends propose to put facts against abuse, and let the people of the city take their choice.

STATE COMMITTEE RE-ELECTS MACLEOD

The Democratic State Committee for 1910 organized yesterday afternoon at the Quincy House, re-elected Fred A. Macleod of Cambridge as chairman and elected Fitzgerald Boston men to the offices of first vice chairman, secretary and treasurer. There was a movement to pass a resolution calling upon the Democrats of Boston to support John F. Fitzgerald [illegible] Macleod, who is also a Boston resident, but as Mayor Hibbard objected it was not pressed, on the ground that the contest [illegible] was already [illegible] Boston interest and that Boston was plenty [illegible] home fuss.

Boston In Control.

The Fitzgerald sentiment came from certain up-State Democrats and their argument was that a Republican legislature should not be allowed to nominate the Democratic party of Boston and control [illegible] Of fifty-four members of the new State committee, only four were present.

After unanimously re-electing Fred A. Macleod the committee re-elected as secretary Thomas J. Collins of South Boston and [illegible] candidate for the City Council on the Fitzgerald ticket; chose Charles F. Riordan, one of the Fitzgerald leaders in Ward 20, as treasurer, and then elected as first vice-president Fitzgerald's campaign manager, John F. McDonald of Boston.

For the first time in twelve years all the offices in the Democratic State organization pass into the hands of practically Boston members. And without doubt the offices were passed over by Democrats disgusted from the Herald-Traveler Cape Cod

Caucus Date September 27.

Vice presidents elected to serve with Manager McDonald, whom Chairman Macleod will appoint again to head the State executive committee, are: James W. Ryan of Pittsfield, Daniel F. O'Connell of Worcester, Roger Sherman Hoar of Concord, Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield and Thomas L. Lawler of Greenfield.

Tuesday, September 27, was chosen as the date for the State caucuses. The caucus on this date will be held, not only in Boston and the cities and towns which have accepted the joint caucus act, but in all other cities and towns in the Commonwealth.

$110 for Hitting Hackman.

Leonard T. Richardson, thirty years old, of Cambridge, was before Judge Murray in Police Court yesterday, charged with assault and battery on Dennis O'Brien, a hackman, and drunkenness. Richardson was fined $100 on the assault charge and $10 on the intoxication complaint. He appealed and was held in [illegible]

Filene's Tunnel Bargain Basement | Filene's Tunnel Bargain Basement

The Price Tags reproduced herewith are actual tags on lots that have been Automatically Reduced and which will be on sale at 8:30 Monday morning—given to show the workings of the AUTOMATIC PRICE REDUCTIONS

First Birthday Sale of the Tunnel Bargain Basement
The Only Store of its Kind in the World

1. A Store where the first price at which a lot is offered must be so extraordinary as to sell it out quickly—or make us lose heavily—by our Automatic Reduction System. See this explained elsewhere on this page—if you are not already fan bar with it.

(You never heard of another store doing anything like this.)

2. Every piece of merchandise has the date received. So you can figure when the Reductions are due and what they ought to be.

3. Every piece of merchandise must be on sale from the very start at an extraordinary bargain price—a price concession.

(No other store in the world does that—with ALL its lots.)

4. Should you find any misrepresentation in the advertising or on the price tags on the garment we will pay you 5.00 if you are the first to report it to us

5. Bargains, Clearances, Surplus Stocks and Entire Stocks of Stores going out of Business, Importers' and Manufacturers' Fine Samples. Nothing but Bargains. No regular stocks—no regular departments.

(Do you know of any other store in the world like this?)

6. A clearing house for makers and importers of all kinds of women's and children's apparel from the finest to the cheapest (of good quality)

7. A Bargain Store with hundreds of silent salesmen constantly on the lookout in all available markets for worthy bargains to be sold at big savings to the Consumer—and a small profit to us (If we make no mistakes).

(No other Store in the world like this.)

Better Be Here Tomorrow!

We celebrate tomorrow the opening just one year ago (January 4, 1909) of a New Kind of a Store, new not only to Boston but to the world of retail merchandising. And we celebrate it in a most practical manner—a Sale of Savings extraordinary you must admit it to be—and certainly of genuine service to thousands of people in and around Boston to whom saving is important or necessary.

The Filene Bargain Basement in many respects was a great success at the start and a great success every month since.

It has not made money for us—we are frank to say.

The Automatic Price System has cost us many thousands of dollars.

The slight profit we have been able to make on many of the lots has not been sufficient to offset the losses of the Automatic Price Reduction System.

There were mistakes in buying. There were mistakes in fixing the first price and so on—that entailed great losses. But we can profit from these mistakes next year—by not making them again—or making fewer. In any event—our good work—or our mistakes, have meant big savings to those who have followed the events here from day to day—and made it a practice to walk through the Filene Bargain Basement two or three times a week.

We start off the second year of this Store tomorrow. It will be a big sale.

Bigger than we are likely to hold any one day for another year—so far as we can see ahead now.

We can't advertise everything in the sale. But read carefully what is advertised. Check on this page what you will look up especially. But—above all come early.

Examples of Hundreds of Lots, Many of Which Are Not Advertised

In order to put on a big bargain square as fast as possible to enable us to offer such extraordinary bargains, many of our lots never get a chance to be advertised.

The Automatic Price Reductions

The first price must be so extraordinary that practically everybody who sees the lot will buy at sight, and the lot will sell out quickly

Because Sundays and Holidays are of course exceptions in figuring the Automatic Price Reductions)

If by any chance any pieces remain at the End of the Second Week— Reduction 25%

If by any chance any pieces remain at the End of the Third Week— Reduction 50%

If any pieces still remain at the End of the Fourth Week— Reduction 75%

If, even after these reductions, any pieces should remain at the End of Fifth Week—

They Will Be Given Away

DRAPER AGAIN TAKES OATH OF OFFICE JAN. 6

Message of Chief Executive Said to Be Brief and Business-Like; Retains Scenes to Take Up Important Measures

W[illegible] Governor-elect Draper will be inaugurated for a second term on Thursday at noon.

The inaugural ceremonies on Thursday will be as simple and unostentatious as possible. Governor Draper does not like pomp and ceremony, and would prefer to have the whole affair, short of the public office and ceremonies, from the Secretary's room to the State House and other than the Inaugural ceremonies will be held in the hall of the House of Representatives.

Olin to Give Oath.

Secretary of State William M. Olin will administer the oath of office. The moment the Governor has subscribed to the oath, a signal will be given to a messenger in the window of the Governor's room, the messenger will signal to a bombardier, a mounted bugler in the street below will sound a flourish of trumpets and the Common will announce that the old Governor has been inaugurated.

Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham will be reinducted into office immediately after Governor Draper. President Allen T. Treadway of the Senate will preside at the ceremonies. The Senate and House, sitting jointly, the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court and 400 invited guests will occupy the floor of the House Chamber. In the galleries will be 800 women. Mrs. Draper and a party of women friends will occupy the small balcony known as "the Speaker's gallery."

Governor Draper will read his inaugural message following the administering of the oaths of office to himself and the Lieutenant-Governor. The inaugural message is what will most interest the State at large.

Plan Brilliant Reception.

Following the inauguration ceremonies in the House chamber there will be the usual reception in the executive chamber. Special tickets for this function will be required.

There is lacking this year the uncertainty as to what Governor Draper's policies would be when he was inaugurated a year ago. A continuation of last year's methods in straight business administration is unofficially forecasted from the Governor's office. The Governor himself will be spared uneasiness by the advent of only four new members to the Executive Council. Councillors Murray of Boston, Gove of Salem, Fletcher of Westford and Cushing of Norwood will be the new members. Murray will be the lone Democratic member. The three others are known to be in accord with Draper policies.

Walker Again in Chair.

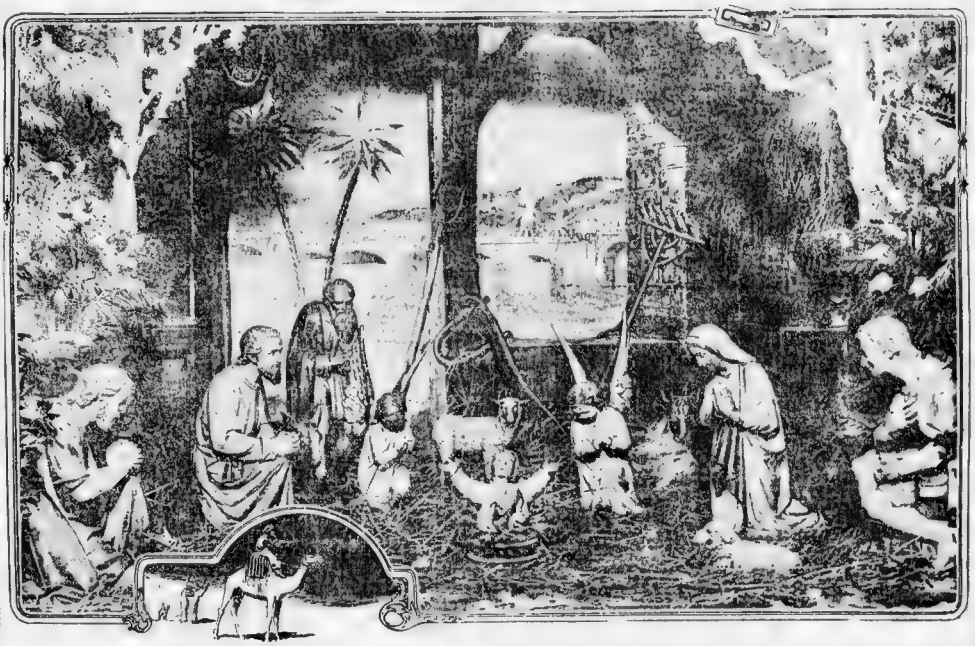
Joseph Walker of Brookline will succeed himself as Speaker of the House. Knight of Jamaica Plain is due for the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, which carries with it the office of floor leader. Norman White of Brookline is in line for the "watchdog of the treasury" job in the House. The appointment of Grafton Cushing of Ward 11, Boston, as chairman of the Committee on Election Laws, the body which uses the hook on direct nomination bills, would please Mr. H. C. Lodge of Nahant. Mr. Cushing will get the job if he wants it.

It will be a busy year on Beacon Hill. Every year is a busy one. But this one [illegible] out as a busy one before it has begun. Twenty-one special commissions, all appointed by last year's Legislature to investigate special matters, will report to this year's body. Their reports will keep the two branches busy. The findings and reports of the special commissions which have been investigating the Boston transit problem and the development of Boston's water front, will give the House and [illegible] committees several days' work. The Income Tax Amendment, the usual [illegible] of labor bills, street railway problems and proposed amendments to Boston's charter will help to keep the solons busy.

Hundreds Bow in Prayer in Cathedral at Impressive, Life-Like Scene of the Nativity Morning at Bethlehem



HUNDREDS of people of all ages are visiting the crib at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. It is the most impressive and elaborate representation of the scene of the Nativity at Bethlehem that has ever been placed in a Boston sanctuary.

As one enters the cathedral the eye is attracted by the glistening of a large electric star, symbolic of the Star of Bethlehem, which shines brilliantly above the entrance to the crib. This star was lighted on Christmas Eve. It will be kept illuminated night and day over the realistic scene until the Feast of the Epiphany, which occurs January 6.

The crib is located on the right hand side of the sanctuary. All around the grotto like arrangement are rich evergreen and laurel drapings, while the roof is covered with straw, and at the back and on the sides of the interior are pictorial representations of the country around Bethlehem.

The scene in the stable itself is striking in the extreme. The faces of the figures as they bend in wonder over the little bed of straw in the crib, in which the Christ Child is lying, are full of expression, while in the background are seen the cattle, even their quiet and listening attitude suggesting some realization of the meaning of the scene.

In the pews before the crib, the faithful are kneeling telling their beads in silent prayer while all around them the gloom of the great cathedral brings out in still stronger relief the figures in the flaming robed stable.

After the services of Te Deum, presided over by Archbishop O'Connell, held in thanksgiving for the blessings of the old year, large numbers remained to visit and admire the crib, the arrangement of which was planned by Monsignor Patterson, the cathedral rector, and by Monsignor Splaine, chancellor of the archdiocese.

CHINESE MERCHANT TAKES SCOTCH BRIDE

Frank Wong Poy, Chinese merchant, and his Scotch bride, formerly Miss May McDonald Bowles, are enjoying their honeymoon at No. 150 Tyler street in the Chinatown district.

Frank Wong Poy is [illegible] is the son of Wong Hop and Josie See of China. He has been living up to the time of his marriage, at No. 22 Oxford street.

Mrs. Frank Wong Poy is twenty-four years old and a native of Scotland. Her parents bore the good old Scotch names of John Bowles and Annie McDonald Bowles. The mother's family name is the daughter's middle name. The bride's full name now is Mrs. Mary McDonald Bowles Wong Poy.

The wedding took place last Wednesday night at the office of George M. Young, Justice of the Peace, at No. 1021 Washington street. Mr. Young received a note in the afternoon that a couple would come to him to be married that evening. At 8 o'clock Frank Wong Poy, the bride-elect, and a white woman friend of the latter appeared. Though Mr. Young had not anticipated a Chinese-Caucasian marriage, he performed the ceremony with the usual legal despatch.

"After they were made man and wife," said Mr. Young to-day, "the bridegroom put on his bride's finger one of the finest diamond rings I ever saw. It must have cost $500."

BOWERY EVANGELIST HERE.

D. J. Ranney Speaks To-day in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

David J. Ranney of the New York Bowery, who has attracted and spoken so interestingly to large audiences of men several times in Boston, returns to the city to-day, speaking here and at other points during the week. The first engagement will be at the men's meeting in Y. M. C. A. Hall this afternoon at 3.30. The Association Men's chorus will, previous to the talk, furnish some fine musical numbers. All men are welcome. There is no charge for admission.

THOUSANDS NOW TO WORK FEWER HOURS

Thousands of mill and factory operatives in Massachusetts and Rhode Island will work two hours less a week beginning to-morrow, on account of the operation of the fifty-six hour law passed by the last Legislature.

The reduction of hours will affect practically New Bedford, Fall River and other textile centres in Massachusetts Providence, Pawtucket and the mill towns of the Pawtuxet Valley will be similarly affected in Rhode Island.

The extent of time lost to the manufacturers and gained to the operatives is indicated by the fact that in Rhode Island alone 20,000 operatives will lose two hours each a week, 40,000 hours in all per week. This gives a total of 2,080,000 hours a year in Rhode Island.

There will be a variety of running schedules for the big mills now. In Rhode Island the dozen plants of B. B. & R. Knight, for instance, will run from 7 a. m. to 12 noon, and from 12.30 p. m. to 6 p. m., five days a week, closing at 12.10 noon on Saturdays.

In Fall River some mills will start at 6.30 a. m. Others will start up at 6.30. Others will take twenty minutes off at each end of the day.

While the new statute applies only to women and minors, it affects the men as well in textile plants and other establishments where it is impossible to separate the grades of work into different schedule.

SNEEZES FOURTEEN HOURS

Physicians Are Forced to Etherize Hysterical Young Woman.

ALBANY, Me., Jan. 1.—After sneezing continuously for over fourteen hours, Miss Gladys Grover, one of the most popular young women of the town, became hysterical, and not until she had been etherized were the physicians able to relieve her. She had been in her usual good health except for a slight cold in the head.

Belfast Is Proud Of Pair of Twins Past Age of 90

Harrison Wallace and Mrs. Harriet Weeks Are Both in Excellent Health.

BELFAST, Me., Jan. 1.—Harrison Wallace and Mrs. Harriet Weeks, who have lately passed their ninetieth birthdays, are a pair of twins of whom the residents of this city feel proud. At a dance given recently by Mrs. Weeks at her home, the table cloth used was one woven by her more than seventy years ago, and the dinner was prepared in old-fashioned kettles in the kitchen. Mrs. Weeks is a well preserved woman, and attends to many household duties herself. Mr. Wallace is a great lover of horses, and on his last birthday took a long ride on horseback, as is his habit nearly every day. Mr. Wallace's father was a captain in the Revolutionary War.

YALE TAKES SAGE GIFT.

Will Formally Accept Woman's $650,000 Offer Next Week.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 1.—The gift of $650,000 to Yale from Mrs. Russell Sage, the second largest in the history of the university, being exceeded only by the $1,000,000 donation of John D. Rockefeller, will be accepted formally by the Yale corporation on January 10, it was learned to-day. Mrs. Sage gave this sum for the purchase of the Hillhouse property on Prospect street containing thirty acres, now held by Yale under mortgage. It is desired to use the entire as a new campus.

Charity Goes Astray.

WESTFIELD, Jan. 1.—Through a misunderstanding a check for $30, the proceeds of a benefit performance given by the Messrs. Goldwein of the Westfield Opera House, to aid in supplying the poor of the town with Christmas cheer, was delayed in being handed over to Town Almoner Fred Rick A. Rich until after the holiday. The check was returned by Mr. Rich to the managers of the theatre, as he believed he had no legal right to retain the same and was it for other purposes.

1 KILLED, 7 INJURED IN PIPE EXPLOSION

One man was killed, another fatally scalded and six others painfully hurt yesterday morning when a large steam pipe in the plant of the Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Company exploded, filling a room in which about seventy-five persons worked with steam. The dead:

SWINEHER, JAMES A., No. 1 Rutland Square, Boston; at Cambridge Relief Hospital.

The other six employes who were scalded were all hurried to the Red Cross Hospital department where they were treated and sent to their homes.

The Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Company's plant is at Hampshire and Portland streets, Cambridgeport. About 2,500 employes, many of them girls, were at work at the time of the explosion. The bursting of the pipe made a tremendous report and the employes fled in a panic. No one except those caught by the escaping steam was hurt. For some time the entire plant was shut down as a result of the scare. Quick work by the engineers in shutting off the steam prevented more serious damage. The injured men were rushed away to the hospitals in ambulances and work was finally resumed.

Woman Passes Century Mark.

WESTFIELD, Jan. 1.—The oldest person in this vicinity to greet the new year is Mrs. Lavinia Parks of Russell, who has passed the century mark. Mrs. Parks was born June 6, 1809. Despite her advanced years she retains her faculties to a remarkable degree.

Ice Harvest Begins.

WESTFIELD, Jan. 1.—The annual ice harvesting was begun south. The Berkshire Ice Company, one of the largest ice companies in New England, which annually cuts hundreds of tons, will begin operations at Congamond Lakes, Southwick, early this week.

WATCHMAN FROZEN TO DEATH ON DUTY

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 1.—William Forster, forty-eight years old, employed in the Williamsport brickyards as a watchman, was found frozen to death to-day by Patrick Kelliher, foreman of the yards. Forster lived in a shack in the yards, and it is thought he was overcome by the intense cold on his way to the shack after making his rounds. His body was found about thirty feet from the door.

Mr. Kelliher took the body into the shack thinking that life might not be extinct. He called Dr. F. A. Mead, who said that the man had been dead several hours. Forster came from Montreal, Can., where he leaves a father, a brother Joseph, and two sisters.

JUDGE N. J. HOLDEN DEAD.

Noted Salem Jurist Passes Away at the Age of 82.

SALEM, Jan. 1.—Nathaniel J. Holden, associate justice of the First District Court since 1874, died at his home in Bridge street to-day, after a long illness. He was born in Puritan Town in 1827 and was educated in the public schools of Salem. He was librarian of the Lynn Public Library from 1856 till 1859. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1863 and the year following his admission he was elected State representative and represented Salem two years in that body. In 1868 and 1870 he was elected senator.

Mr. Holden was an uncle to Mayor-elect Howard and was to administer the oath of office to his nephew Monday. His son, Sydney H., was recently appointed secretary to Mayor-elect Howard.

Dover ex-Mayor Buried.

DOVER, N. H., Jan. 1.—The funeral services of Ex-Mayor Henry R. Parker was held to-day. By order of Mayor Foster all business was suspended during the services and the bell on the City Hall was tolled seventy-three times, once for each year of the dead man's age. The services were conducted by the Rev. W. W. Gillis at St. Thomas Episcopal Church and the honorary pall bearers were three ex-mayors.

WAR TO WIPE OUT WHITE SLAVE TRADE IN BOSTON

Now Is Aroused at Social Evil Will Be Presented to Legislature by Officers of the Watch and Ward Society

Measure Will Be So Strictly Worded That It Will Leave No Loop Hole of Escape for the Dealer in Human Souls

THE destruction of white slavery is aimed at in a bill which will be introduced in the Legislature this week by the New England Watch and Ward Society.

Prominent men and women of Massachusetts are cooperating to wipe out the great evil. Startling disclosures will be made before the Legislative Committee which will consider the bill.

A rough draft of this bill has already been made. Certain clauses will be added, however, so as to make a uniform bill. It will leave no loopholes of escape for the "white slave" dealer.

Police Commissioner O'Meara was presented with facts to prove that such a traffic exists in Boston. The evidence was indisputable. He refused to act. Now those who are seeking to wipe out the scourge are to go over his head and make a direct appeal to the Legislature.

Men and women whose investigations are die based a terrible state of affairs in this city, will personally appear before the Legislature, and present facts to prove that white slavery exists in Boston.

A Committee with Steam.

The complete committee which will advocate the passage of the bill has not as yet been definite y settled upon, but the Sunday American is to-day able to announce that it will include these four persons: Mrs. Mary Morton Kehew, president of the Women's Industrial and Educational Union; Mrs. A. M. Hodder of Boston, president of the Massachusetts Hospital Social Service; Bernard J. Rothwell, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly of the Massachusetts Prison Commission.

The committee will present statistics to show that there are 20,000 girls in Greater Boston who will be affected by the bill.

The Sunday American herewith publishes the report of one of the most prominent sociologists in the city; a woman who has made a study of the "white slave" trade in Boston. Her name is withheld in deference to her wishes.

"From a personal investigation of conditions in Boston she writes, 'I have secured positive proof that 'white slavery' exists here. By visiting unfortunate women in various capacities, and by gaining their confidence, I have gradually learned the inside facts of one of the saddest stories America has ever known.

"I have met and talked with girls whose bodies and souls were just as much the property of taskmasters as were the thousands who were sold in the Southland before the war.

"In the South End are countless resorts, notorious dives wherein are young girls, girls to whom death is but a matter of only a few years. They are not all the victims of the 'white-slave' dealer. Such a statement would be absurd to make. Many, however, are. The rest are of the great army from which the dealer in women finds his recruits.

For Love of Luxury.

"In Boston there are many well-holen, many slums of iniquity. They are spelling the ruin of countless girls, who by their love for finery, excitement and luxury, are led from the path of righteousness, the prey of vampires.

"The causes that lead the ignorant girl to take up the life of a woman of the streets are many and varied. It is the cheap dance hall, the love of luxury, the fact that many of them have not the stamina to do vigorous work and the natural craving for excitement and pleasure that are responsible for the downfall of young girls.

"No woman takes up the sordid life deliberately and premeditatedly. She is lured into it. And once she is in the grip of it she is unable, by her own efforts, to regain the brink from which she leaped.

"Man is never asked to work for less than a living wage. There is never a downward limit to the woman's wage. When a woman gets out of work, when she loses ambition, she finds means to add to her wage. She sins. The wages of sin is death.

"Go almost where you will in this throbbing city and you will find at any time of the day or night a

Margaret Welch, School Janitor, Hopes City Will Reimburse Her for Labor.

"The laborer is worthy of his Hire."

BOSTON housewives who complain that "a man's work is never done" and suffragists who say that women should have equal opportunity with men to having their attention called to the case of Miss Margaret Welch, schoolhouse janitor who gets $6.77 per week for a man's work in taking care of the school on the corner of Adams and Chestnut streets, Charlestown. Here are her duties:

Arrives at the school at 7 a m

Makes and shakes down two big furnaces

Takes out the ashes

Goes in the coal and wood from bins in the yard

Washes and sweeps floors in two school rooms and three hallways

Keeps the finished morning during the day

Must back at night to bank the fires, sweeps a halfacre of street and yard and shovels a path

Keeps engineer's room, washes and the rooms [illegible]

Must Shovel Snow Now.

In addition to the above Miss Welch has been ordered to keep the halfacre of sidewalk clear of snow. After the last storm [illegible] took [illegible] men ten hours to shovel it the snow. He charged Miss Welch $47 for the job which he says that [illegible] never pay charged under half of rates.

The schoolhouse department says Miss Welch is not stand that expense herself. If [illegible] is kept, Miss Welch is not pay for the hazard week will be $5.77.

Several interest in age questions, in women's work and in the political end of it need submitting in making the labors of Miss Welch particularly noteworthy at present.

Miss Welch is over fifty years old. She has been [illegible] for [illegible] years. A man of equal experience would be paid $20 a week to shovel the school walks after snow storms. Custodian M. Mc[illegible] of Public Buildings Department has been notified that his pay will be removed from the [illegible] of the school [illegible] So Miss Welch has sent in her $47 to the school department and is waiting to see if it will be paid.

$2.77 For Week's Work.

If Miss Welch has to pay the snowplough bill she earnestly hopes there will be no more hazards this Winter. It is a sad story for an honest [illegible] to pay for the labor. Just $4 out of a week's pay envelope of $6.77 leaves too little for daily expenses, even when times are [illegible]

[illegible] to-day.

I got up [illegible] o'clock in the morning and after I have prepared my breakfast I go to the schoolhouse, at [illegible] o'clock.

After I have raked up the ashes from the fires, taken out the ashes, swept the floor and washed it, if necessary, I have to get the school rooms in condition for the day.

I keep the fires running through the day, sweep and clean the school floors and hallways after school hours for [illegible] at night and do all the repairing I have to keep clean.

In Summer I sweep the walks of the schoolyard and the street walks on each side. The school lot [illegible] feet on Chestnut street and 120 feet on Adams street. The walks are [illegible] feet wide.

"When the heavy snow came Sunday I supposed the contractor [illegible] the same man who had been doing it for years. In all the years I have been janitor here I never had to bother with the snow, so I was somewhat surprised when it was allowed to remain.

"However, I paid a man to shovel the snow. He charged me $4. He said that if he didn't know me the job would have cost a dollar or two more. He worked at it steadily from 4 to 10 p m Wednesday and from 9 a m to 1 p m Thursday. All the work I myself could [illegible] hours. It was so hard down hard and cold to [illegible] I would send the bill in to schoolhouse department. I don't know if they will reimburse me or not if they don't I suppose I shall have to stand the expense myself.

125,000 ASK WAGE RAISE.

22,000 Railroad Men on Roads Here Are Affected.

Twenty-two thousand conductors and trainmen on the three railroads running out of Boston [illegible] with a total of 125,000 men all told, the railroads east of the Mississippi, will be affected by the demand decided to be presented by the railroad trainmen to-morrow asking for the establishment of a higher wage scale. The three railroads [illegible] 20 to confer over the question. Failing to make favorable reply at that time a strike that will tie up the entire railroad system of the East may follow.

The scale demanded calls for a minimum wage of $3.25 a day for passenger conductors. They now get $3.60 for the first 100 miles of a run and one cent more for each mile. Baggagemasters who now get $2.30, will be half cent over [illegible] a $2.75 minimum. passenger brakemen and flagmen, who get $2.10 and one half cent over mileage, $2.50 minimum.

Young Cannon was employed by his father, and made an examination of his books a few days ago and found a shortage.

Young Cannon, according to the police, broke down last night when arrested and admitted the forging of his father's name to a check for $15. He said he intended to put the money back before anyone discovered the shortage in order to buy a new suit of clothes.

The case will be tried in the Newton police court to-morrow.

NEW FEDERAL LAW MAKES DRY TOWNS STILL DRYER

Two Years in Prison and $5,000 Fine Likely to Hit Offenders.

"PONY EXPRESS" MUST GO

BEGINNING to-day every town in New England will be drier than ever before seen. The people and the club be holds over the liquor men is two years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine.

It is farewell to the express companies as wholesale liquor sellers this year. The elimination of the express business on the plea that the Federal Government will protect interstate shipments will not hold water as long as it will be easier to send in the bottled goods through the mails than under the play of being an express company.

The big business used by the so-called express companies to ship liquor from over the state lines, New York and New Hampshire and Rhode Island, has been plugged up.

The attorneys for the express companies in Iowa and Nebraska, after they carried along the North Shore, confessed that they don't know how to get around the new law.

It's All Over Now.

Until now it has been possible in a dry city to go to an express company's office and order liquor. Very often the express company would send the liquor and fifteen minutes after would take a gamble from its store room and deliver, then get the money.

Large shipments came in for fictitious persons, and upon orders from others the name would be changed after the goods arrived. Packages were not marked and the feeling of evasion at smuggling liquor in a dry community was strong.

Beginning with January 1 every such condition is impossible. The traveling wagon of the express companies which stops at each door takes orders for interstate liquor deliveries and then delivers on the spot, will have to get out of business.

The liquor agency which takes orders and cash on the dry end of the business will have to go out of business or find some loophole which its lawyer has not yet been able to find.

For the few saw pings up three holes which hitherto have saved the liquor interests.

Calls for Jail and Fine.

It makes it necessary for the person who orders liquors to pay for it in the town from which it is shipped instead of the delivery. It makes it necessary for every package to be plainly marked with the address of the consignee and must not be delivered to any other person except on the written order of the consignee.

It makes it illegal for any person to take orders for liquor in a dry town.

Violation of any of these prohibitions involves a fine of $5,000 and in some cases two years in jail.

Here is the section of the new law as it applies to the dry cities and towns of Massachusetts:

Section 270. No common carrier shall collect or receive for carriage or any part thereof for pay brought into the state in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act or any other commerce law, or for the owner or agent, except in the line of regular business and the delivery of said liquors.

Sec. 271. All packages containing liquors imported into the State shall be plainly marked on the outside to show the name and address of the consignee, the nature of the contents, and the quantity contained therein.

FOWLER WINNER OF 20-MILE MARATHON

Renaud Gets Second Place When Silva's Feet Fail Him and He Quits.

[illegible] veteran Marathoner, won the twenty-mile three-cornered race over the Armory [illegible] last night [illegible] Renaud, N. H. [illegible] Silva, of Clairemont, who [illegible] to quit in the interest of time [illegible] feet west [illegible]

Fowler's time was 1:45:01. From the fourth mile on he never headed and in the final mile, just to show what was left in him, [illegible] as if [illegible] sprint race.

Silva was [illegible] to give Fowler a race and [illegible] pedestrian when he was [illegible] Iron out when the end was almost in sight and he was sure of second place.

To the [illegible] Silva [illegible] 16 [illegible] of Mc Dougall [illegible] to show signs of distress as the shoes he was wearing tortured his feet and left streaks of blood on the track.

He changed shoes and walked for a couple of laps. Then he plodded on slowly, creeping down until he became exhausted and quit with but a half mile to the long journey he succumbed to the pain.

Fowler's time for the distance of 1 hr 21 was fast and showed that he was in prime condition for a hard struggle.

Renaud's showing was somewhat of a surprise as he was [illegible] of the B. A. A. [illegible] April and was expected to [illegible] for first place, but he did not figure after leading for the first mile and the other two walked laps and then quit in the race. Fowler opened up his speed before the others had been counted and had a lap on Renaud and kept increasing it going to the end. The summary:

DE ORO TO PLAY HERE.

Will Meet John Daly at the Imperial.

De Oro, the champion three-cushion billiard player, to get into practice for his game against Fred Lamen in New York next week, has made arrangements to play John Daly a 150 point match right here in Boston, at the Imperial, fifty points each night, this week on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the games starting at 7:30.

This means more than might be supposed [illegible] opportunity [illegible] Daly [illegible] has been looked [illegible]

TECH TEAM BEATS DARTMOUTH BY SCORE 1 TO 0

Technology triumphed over Dartmouth on their hockey clash on the ice at the Brae Burn Country Club rink yesterday afternoon by the score of 1-0.

It was a narrow [illegible] for the 1st aggregation of collegians and the one point made in the middle of the first period was the only score in the whole contest.

O'Hearn of the Red and Grey was the individual who shone for the winners as he was his war club that sent the rubber into the netting and the longer the game went the bigger that one score looked to the Hanover boys.

It was clever passing on the part of the Tech forwards that got the one goal and the final shot that O'Hearn took which brought about the conquest of the husky Dartmouth bunch.

But [illegible] went after victory hammer and tong in the second half. Every inch [illegible] to get an even terms and Tech to hold its small advantage.

The game became more and more of the football variety, the forwards banging into the forwards of the opposing sides with all the vigor of gridiron interference, and the fine work done by Bartlett that Percy was forced to suspend several players till they cooled down.

Dartmouth made a gallant attempt to even up the score, but to no avail. They found in Billings, at cover point, a big obstacle in their pathway as he time and again broke up the combination play. The summary:

| TECH. | | DARTMOUTH. |

ALL STARS WIN AGAIN OVER FOREST HILL

The A. A. A. basketball team defeated the Forest Hills A. C. in the second game of the series between the two clubs by the score of 46 to 27, in their hall at Roxbury last night.

This is the second victory of the All Stars, but the teams will pitch up again before the season is over on neutral grounds.

It was one of the roughest contests on the floor seen in Roxbury, and the visiting players had fourteen fouls called on them, while not a penalty was inflicted on the All Stars.

Kelleher did some fine shooting for the basket, and his passing with Andrews was excellent. The backfield of the winners was also prominent in figuring in the scoring, Dougherty played in the place of Captain Hoyt, who is laid up with a broken collar bone, and did excellent work.

The All Star second team defeated the Forest Hills second, 24 to 21, in a close scrap. Madden and O'Brien did the best playing. The summary:

World's Champion Stock Endurance Car

Creates enthusiasm everywhere—you can blow away all care with explosions of this real Automobile.

22,000 mile trips don't just happen to happen. A Thomas car, absolutely stock, such as we are delivering to all buyers of a Model "E," covered this distance in its brea... neck swing around the globe, winning from the best cars of three nations.

Up to date it has run 50,000 miles, once around the world, twice across the continent as pathfinder for the New York-Seattle and Fort Worth-Texas endurance c... during absolutely a clean score. Here... Automobile endurance contests have been run (the longest 1700 miles in the summer time, only in daylight, seldom more than 150 miles per day, on roads well travelled.

This unbelievable journey meant driving for days at a time on low gear, a distance of eight thousand miles, through blizzards, through snow, through hub-deep mud, and swamps, fording streams, over cross ties and over mountains where no road had ever been made. Numerous photographs were secured, by calling at our store we could take you on the trip.

During the 88 Running Days of inconceivable punishment it never saw a repair shop. From the day this car was taken from stock until now its thousands of miles of steel roadbed have meant not one serious break-down. 12,000 miles without changing valves, spark plugs, adjusting bearings, or repairing motor ... ties, wide apart and unballasted, running fast to prevent wheels locating between the ties, with driver strapped ... Frames, bearings and every part strained hundreds of times more than any car was ever strained, and yet the old Thomas Flyer is good for another trip around the world.

Every Thomas Model "F," "K" or "M" will do the same work, and each car, with three seasons' improvements, will give more service than any car in America.

Call and See our eight-foot list of 1910 Eastern Thomas purchasers, our collection of hundreds of testimonial letters from satisfied Eastern Thomas owners—our long list of Thomas owners whose cars have seen six or more years of service with practically no expense for upkeep. Open to all—inspection invited.

We Want Prospective Purchasers to find out more about the Thomas by testing its riding qualities. Expect much and you'll not be disappointed.

Queer Heavenly Language Used in the Book, "Both Sides of the Veil."

DECLARING that he has no faith what-ever in the so-called revelations from the dead the grave contained in "Both Sides of the Veil," the book published in Boston, which professes to give the experiences in another life of the late General Martin, ex-Mayor of Boston, former Police Commissioner, former Water Commissioner and for years one of the best known Bostonians, Rev. Dr. James Alexander, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, goes on record as classing it as an hallucination.

Rev. Dr. Alexander is a deep student of psychological phenomena, but he insists at the claim that Mrs. Leonora B. Piper has been able to bring from the unknown the experiences of General Martin since he ceased to be of earth. These experiences are said to have been transmitted to Miss Mamie Robbins, a stenographer, and the reports made by Miss Robbins were for the Society of Psychical Research.

"The very absurdity of this claim lies on the face of it," Rev. Dr. Alexander declared after reading some of the passages in the book—alleged messages from the dead General. "It is intensely humorous. I see from this paragraph that the spirit of General Martin sees flowers in this other world of which the story speaks." Then he quoted from what the spirit of General Martin is claimed to have said.

"I feel as though the air was filled with perfume and I was floating above my body, until I passed simply behind a veil. Then, after we have passed beyond it, why the music, the flowers, the trees, the birds, the lakes, the rivers, the hills, the gardens, the walks are perfectly magnificent."

Ministers in Heaven?

Rev. Dr. Alexander continued his comment:

"This to me mind is simply nonsense because these things which he mentions are materialistic. They cannot exist in a world of spirit, and this makes one suspicious of all this kind of talk about eternity. You must not associate anything that is merely material with it, and for this reason the book loses its power because the mind that gave vent to these sentences is merely in this world.

"Then he talks of meeting a minister there. Now I do not think the spirit world is inhabited by any professional men. If there are ministers there, why not lawyers and newspapermen? For they have as much to do with life as the minister. I do not think that the other world is watched over by ministers, or any other professional men. The spirits of the men are there, but they do not ply their callings. Everything is spiritual there, and there is no room for anything that savors of this earth.

Queer Language in Paradise.

"This talk about walls and pictures upon them is an hallucination. General Martin says: 'I saw beautiful pictures upon the walls. I saw beautiful flowers that we call in the body pains, growing about me.'

"Why in strict English you can't call a palm a flower," said Dr. Alexander. "If all this be true, there must be something wrong with the language of Heaven. Every one knows that such descriptions of the other world are merely visionary.

"This playing upon instruments in heaven is merely a freak of the imagination and this talk about the use of correct English in that state of existence is another sign that the whole thing is too materialistic. In a word I would say, it is all hallucination and freak."

Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Hoblin, pastor of the Columbus Avenue Universalist Church, a student for many years of psychical matters, who anticipated the Emmanuel movement in this city, under another name, and may be called the pioneer in this matter of mental healing, did not care to say anything.

Add to Mystery.

"I have not read this book," he said, "and I do not care to express an opinion without giving the subject some consideration. I do not believe such books clear up the mystery of another life, but rather add to it."

Rev. F. G. Fisher of the First Methodist Church, said, "I know nothing about the book and I have no sympathy at all with such efforts to explain in materialistic terms the mystery of heaven."

TAX THE BACHELORS AND THE CHILDLESS, ADVISES ARCHDEACON S. G. BABCOCK

From "Bells Bachelors."

ALL bachelors twenty years of age or over should be taxed.

All families having two children or one should be compelled to pay a higher school tax than the family with more than that number of children.

In proportion to the number of the children, tax the families.

Do not expect anything like compulsory marriages to improve the present dull season in the matrimonial market.

These are the views of Archdeacon Samuel G. Babcock of the Episcopal Church of Massachusetts, who is a student of social questions, and has a long and practical experience with the affairs of life, being a business man for many years before becoming a clergyman, and who is very much interested in the sudden decrease in the number of marriages in this State.

For the Sunday American Archdeacon Babcock discussed the situation in a frank way. This is what he said:

"All this agitation about compulsory marriages is aside the mark. There is no such thing as compelling people to love each other, for unless they love each other they should not be married. Those persons who . . . talk so glibly about forcing people into marriage are foolish.

"There is however a serious problem before us. It is to increase the marriage rate. Last year thousand less marriages in the State of Massachusetts than a previous year is cause for reflection.

NOT FOR COMPULSORY MARRIAGE.

"The clergy have spoken to me from various parts of this state about the decrease of marriages in their parishes. There must be some remedy. But that remedy is not to be found in compulsory marriage, though some students of the problem have advanced such a theory. There is nothing done satisfactorily when done under force.

"For some time I have been thinking of a scheme to tax bachelors past thirty years and over, and I sincerely believe that it is perfectly feasible and will bring about a desirable reform. Too many young men are afraid to venture today upon the marriage relation. I think they are willing to marry, but they hesitate. Being business men, they naturally look ahead. More so than some of the girls.

"In looking ahead, they think of the high cost of living, and how impossible it is to live in the style in which they were brought up. Young women of today are asking too much of the young men. They must fit them with their fads, and I believe if two young souls are willing to bear and forbear they will be happier married than single.

"Now this tax should be made as a business proposition, for it will make many young men think more seriously of getting a home of their own. I believe the average woman can make any husband happy if he will only try to do his duty and meet her wife half way.

"This tax upon the bachelors will make some think. I say they now think too much, but they will lose their freedom, and the boon to be conferred over these high taxes. Why invest in the young men in the snap of their fathers, who married almost upon nothing, and in many instances have had to struggle. A little struggling and honest effort is beneficial.

"It is the family life that makes the nation, not a lot of old bachelors, who go along in life, and until they even get tired of their own society.

"Something must be done to preserve the family life, and to make our nation a nation of homes and not individuals living in hall bedrooms.

PLENTY OF GOOD WIVES NEGLECTED.

"Why there are plenty of women in this city, working for their own living, who would make excellent wife. But the men are backward. When you have a bachelor tax you will in a measure curb them, and they are worked—their pocketbooks. It is a fact some men are too selfish to be married and to make these come to terms, and get under the direct influence of some good helpful woman would be greatly to their benefit.

"You can always tell a bachelor after you have been with him a short time. As a rule he grows more set in his ways, and in time becomes his nature and gives him a larger and better view of his surroundings. You see this in the married men who have families, and what a view they have of life in contrast to the unmarried man! It is these men who have stepped up a family that the nation needs and should be proud of. It is these people that he has never seen the woman he would like to marry, that man needs the tax more than anyone else, and if that were possible, it should be heavier in this particular case.

"On the matter of children, I am free to say that the man with a large family should have more consideration in every way. I would make the school tax less for him than for the man who had only a few children, and I certainly would tax the man the heaviest who has no children at all. In this class I would suffer myself.

"These are practical subjects, bearing upon the most interesting questions, and they should be talked about more frankly. Unless we aim to preserve the family life, where is the nation going?

"I mean exactly what I say, that a tax is essential to compel the bachelors here in New England to come to the right understanding of themselves and to get out of their loneliness by marrying and being happy. It is the business of every young man to give this question serious investigation. What he learns in sacrifices in the family life prepares him for the greater responsibilities."

WANTED A LINGUIST TO NURSE U. S. BEES

Civil Service Examinations for Jobs With Salaries Ranging From $840 to $2,500.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—If you have had a varied experience as a hunter of bees, including a knowledge of how to approach the business end of a bee without getting stung, and have a working knowledge of French, German, Italian or Spanish, there are several positions with the Government as agricultural assistant open to you, with salaries ranging from $840 to $2,500 a year.

Just what the Government expects an applicant to do with a foreign language as a bee culturist is unknown unless it be that imported bees need soothing to the tongue of their childhood.

The examinations will be held January 19 and 20 in the principal cities where civil service tests are made including St. Louis. The local office is in the old Federal building. Third and Olive streets.

If you don't care much about bee culture the Government offers another good job at this time—the position of the Hot Springs Reservation, Hot Springs, Ark. The job pays from $70 to $80 a month and all you have to do is to look after Government property, report violations of the laws, act as guide for strangers and make arrests when required.

The examination includes reading, writing and arithmetic, but these matters count only 5 per cent each, while general experience, including marksmanship, counts 75 per cent. The examination will be held at Hot Springs January 19.

INDUCT LOWELL'S MAYOR TO-MORROW

John F. Meehan Will Succeed George H. Brown, the Former Policeman.

LOWELL, Jan. 1.—John F. Meehan will be inaugurated mayor of Lowell Monday, succeeding George H. Brown, the former policeman.

The oath of office will be administered by Justice Samuel P. Hadley, and prayer will be said by Rev. William O'Brien, rector of St. Patrick's Church. The retiring mayor will do his part in making the mayor-elect feel at home.

In his inaugural address Mr. Meehan will call attention to a further opportunity to reduce the tax rate. The recent announcement of an increased revenue for 1910 leads to the belief that the tax rate will come down materially. It is now $19.60.

Mayor-elect Meehan will also recommend in his inaugural the maintenance of municipal baths. Lowell is without a city bath at the present time.

Arthur L. Gray will be re-elected chairman of the Board of Aldermen, and Victor B. Jewett will be elected president of the Common Council. To obtain offices of this kind, some of the usual shrewd planning is necessary, for in order to obtain votes, a candidate must give satisfaction in the matter of committee appointments.

In the matter of elections to municipal offices, there are several contests on, but the prediction is made that practically all of the present incumbents will be re-elected. Usually a lively battle for the position of superintendent of streets is waged, but this year Superintendent Newell F. Putnam has the field all to himself, his opponent of last year, Charles E. Morse, having dropped out of the race.

ALIEN INFLUX HERE SHOWS NATION'S PROSPERITY

Tide Turned Toward Europe in 1908, but Conditions Are Just Reversed Now.

OFFICIALS of four railroads say that the surest barometer of business conditions in America is the flow of European immigration. They say that it is not only the surest indication but the quickest. The hard times of 1908 were foreshadowed by a tremendous drop in immigration in December of 1907.

During the first eleven months of the year 1907, when business was booming, immigration through the port of Boston reached figures that had no precedent. In the last month of that year more immigrants returned to their former homes in Europe than arrived here. This was true of the entire year of 1908, except that in December the exodus ceased and the tide turned, indicating that the depressing period of business inactivity was at an end and that another era of national prosperity was at hand.

During the past year the tide rose in great waves and the total immigration through this port was not only very considerable in excess of last year, but well above the average for the past ten years.

55,161 Aliens Landed.

During the year just ended 55,161 aliens paid a head tax of $4 each to Uncle Sam's agents at the port of Boston. This was 22,501 more than came in during the year of 1908 and 4,46 above the average of the past ten years. The immigration for the month of December just past has been very small, well under the average, but for reasons which are easily explained, and not because of dull times. The troubles of the White Star and Cunard lines compelled the managers of these big transportation companies to withdraw some of their passenger ships from Boston to other routes and to substitute freight ships. The loss of the Cunarder Slavonia and the White Star liner Republic was responsible for the temporary withdrawal of two ships from the Boston routes which would have doubtless added about 1,500 to the incoming passengers in Boston if they had been allowed to come here.

Figures by Years.

| | 1909. | 1908. | Av. 10 yrs. |
|---|---|---|---|
| January | 4,504 | 1,487 | 4,504 |
| February | 3,878 | 1,427 | 4,011 |
| March | 6,146 | 2,881 | 4,411 |
| April | 7,858 | 4,518 | 6,655 |
| May | 7,485 | 3,997 | 7,307 |
| June | 6,852 | 2,588 | 6,121 |
| July | 4,945 | 1,666 | 3,600 |
| August | 2,303 | 2,500 | 2,937 |
| September | 3,704 | 3,478 | 3,565 |
| October | 3,521 | 4,022 | 3,476 |
| November | 3,083 | 2,551 | 3,379 |
| December | 1,117 | 1,903 | 2,650 |
| Totals | 55,161 | 32,650 | 51,115 |

Italians Still Lead.

The character of European immigration is constantly undergoing changes, but during the past year it seems to have gone back to first principles. The Italians still lead, but the Jews and the Huns and the Hebrews, the Poles and the Asiatics, who came in hordes during the past few years, have been conspicuous by their absence during 1909. On the other hand, the immigration from the British Isles has never been so large as it has been during the past year.

It is also noted that most of the Irish, English and Scotch immigrants have been skilled workers, mill hands and mechanics or domestic help. The number of these who were in fairly comfortable circumstances in the old country was very large as is shown by the fact that more than 50 per cent of the immigrants from the British Isles came to the second cabin.

Immigrants Second Class.

Recently a Cunard ship came to Boston with more second cabin passengers than steerage, something never heard of in former years. Several ships have been obliged to set apart a section of its first cabin accommodations to make room for the large numbers of second cabin passengers on board.

The outlook for a big influx in 1910 is good. The ships which were temporarily withdrawn from Boston will return within a month or two, and one new line, the Mediterranean Levantine Italiana, will bring in thousands who would otherwise enter the country through New York.

BOSTON COUNTESS SAYS SHE IS A DANCER ONLY FOR THE MONEY IN IT

COUNTESS PIERREFEUE

Former Miss Tudor Defies Society, Declaring It All a Huge Bluff.

By DOROTHY AMES.

"MY career is my first consideration. Whether or not society approves of my undertaking is a matter of small moment. I've had society's ever since I was born. I never found that it was especially interesting. I never found that I received many ideas from association with society people. I haven't any doubt but that I can keep the same position in society I have always held, but if I can't I don't care very much. If my dancing is a success I won't bother about society. Society will bother about me. There is nothing that succeeds like success, you know.

"If you come from the gutter even, and really do something worth while, people will take you up and make you one of them."

That's the way the Countess Olga de Pierrefeu, of the old Boston family of Tudors, whose appointment of a pergami of barefoot dancer has startled Boston society, feels about the attitude of the smart set. She passed me at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rodolphe Kemper, in Marlboro street.

"What is society? After a few sessions with it one finds that dull results are the outcome. You meet the other people over and over again. You go to the same places, you do the same things, and what's better off are you or what have you accomplished? Society people really bore me to death, even if they do have original ideas and thoughts. They just go on and on, the same program over and over again, and the worst of it is, the most of them are satisfied to do so. They have never done anything else and they don't know anything different.

Something of a Shock.

"To be sure, when one is the first Boston woman to take up the classic dancing it's hard to find the way. People are surprised if you want to earn money, and if you want to earn it by dancing barefooted they stand aghast.

"I didn't decide on the thing quickly. I knew two years ago that I would start the thing sooner or later, only I didn't tell anybody. My people didn't approve. My husband didn't approve. And right here, I want to say that terribly mean things have been said about my husband. The papers have said that he didn't support me. They even insinuated that he would be glad to come to me for help if the dancing proved successful.

"My husband is certainly far from wealthy, but he allowed me a goodly sum for me most heartily. But I wanted to earn money, a lot of money in a short time. I have the talent. Friends have urged me to give performances. Finally I put my pride in my pocket, and now I'm going to earn just as much money as I can. I'll even go into vaudeville, if there's enough money in it."

Apropos of the question of one's feet, the Countess has just so decided opinions on that subject also.

"I consider a daintily barefooted fire years ago when I appeared in 'Aladdin,' but I didn't have the courage. No one had done any barefoot dancing at that time, and I was afraid the public wouldn't stand for it. Even then, though, I realized that in several of the dances I could not do my best work because of the sandals. Now that I have danced so much, it just hard to appear that way at all. I forget all about my feet when I'm dancing.

"I draw the line on the filmy draperies, of that you may be sure. My ideas on that subject are positive and certain. It is necessary to have one's feet bare, but it doesn't help the dancing any to cut line the entire figure. I want to draw audiences by the artistic merits of my creations, not by the scarcity of my attire.

"I think, and I have heard other people say, that the secret of the success of some of the so-called classic dancers is that they are willing to appear in the garb they wear. There is as much chance for a thing of that sort to be misunderstood, that I am not taking my chances. My costumes will be unusual, but not displeasing.

"This performance in Boston will be the hardest of all. Boston as a city is the rudest and most critical, and then it is where I'm known so well. If it were as easy to appear before strangers as it is before your own friends and people I've known all my life, as Countess de Pierrefeu, but in other cities, I shall be known simply as Madame de Pierrefeu. Although my husband has ever used to my using his name, I do not feel that I ought to, out of respect for his relatives in France, and that, too, I want to succeed on my own merit.

"Advertising this dancing idea of mine has been splendid work. No one approved, every one tried in the beginning to make it just as hard for me as possible. One by one, however I have won them all over, and if some of my family and friends are not enthusiastic about it, they are at least tolerant and no longer aggressive.

Nobody Had Any Money.

"It's awful—asking! I'll say the things about it I've had said. Such cases as mine I put him in Brittany while visiting my aunt. The same cable was sent by sudden death. We were poor. We didn't have any money. Neither did I. For a time he worked in a bank, but for the last three years he has been with a steel company in Chicago. If he does very well and his position is becoming better all the time. He is doing all that can be expected of him and my going on the stage is simply because I am d sirous of earning more money.

"My father, who is an artist, is convinced that I am doing the right thing. He believes that I have something to give to the world and that it would be wrong for me to withhold it.

"My culture is —

But the Countess didn't say further, and I couldn't refrain a gasp of surprise.

"Oh, yes, I have three children and I want people to know it, in spite of the fact that my manager think it would be better not to say anything about it. If I go on tour, I shall plan to have a few days out of each month to spend with my husband in Chicago and with the children in the room I have settled her in Brookline. I may lose some money by doing so, but my career isn't worth giving up everything.

Dances Are Original.

"I am on record that my 'Dances of the Countess' are not at all original. To be sure, the Late Father has given a fire dance, fire dance gives fire effects. I want to give something of the spirit of fire, of the flame and sparkle and glitter of fire, but just the same way with the other women's dances.

"I call my dances symbolic on account of this. The dances of Duncan should be called lyric dan ing with pantomime. Those of Ruth St. Denis are more dramatic. I think that St. Denis has much more to say, more to give the world in her dances than Duncan.

"As far as the actual technique of my dances is concerned, that does not vary materially. But the dramatic action, the emotional end of it, is never the same. To me, one cannot always wait for the music to work or the inspiration to present itself. If we did we wouldn't dance much or write much. We just have to grind ourselves down to the work in hand and wait the inspiration for our own. Sometimes one dances better than others, but it is always all a good actress she can make the most of and dance up to it."

BOSTON SECOND CITY IN TOTAL OF PUBLIC DEBT

EACH PERSON OWES $183.66

Total Debt is $108,434,606, With Extra Liability for State Expenses.

WHEN someone in New York sent out the statement that Gotham led in per capita debt and Cincinnati was second with Boston third that person fattened fast at the expense of Cincinnati.

The figures for Cincinnati were $123.85 for every man, woman and child in that city. The figures for Boston were given as $1.22 for every man woman and child. If Cincinnati had a larger per capita debt than Boston it would owe about $20,000,000 more than it does now. For an honest examination of Boston's debt, with no reference to politics or who contracted that debt, placing it about $110,000,000 with a per capita debt of about $183.66.

Translated into plain English that means that Boston people, men, women and children, asleep or awaiting so long as they live in Boston, owe, each and every one of them, just $183.66.

Persons who do not own property can move away without holding on to that debt. The moment they are out of the city they are free of that obligation.

Taxable Real Estate.

Land and buildings cannot be moved. They may be sold, but every time they are sold the share of the city's enormous debt goes with them. In other words Boston real estate owes to the world just about $120,000,000 for the two dollar in the one hundred it pays in taxes.

The taxable real estate of the city of Boston, that is, all the real property that can be reached within the city limits, is worth about $1,400,000,000. This included the homes of the poor, every bit of which is free from all other mortgages but Dorchester. It includes homes and business blocks in fact everything that stands on land.

On that there is a debt of about $110,000,000. In other words there is a mortgage of about eight per cent, on every bit of property in Boston. Those who buys a little home does so without realizing that he has a mortgage of eight per cent. on the value of that home. If the city should become unable to pay its interest charges or the principal as it becomes due the holders would levy on the land and houses of the people.

Mortgage on People.

Despite the impression given by flowery orators, city debts are not placed on city property. The City Hall and other public buildings are not the property thus mortgaged. The property and future every man woman and child is mortgaged every time the city borrows money.

The total city debt, according to the city auditor, December 31, 1909, was $108,484,606. The sinking funds to pay this amounted to $14,305,721.10, making a net debt, county and city, of $94,178,884.90, not counted in determining the borrowing capacity of the city of $74,000,000 on the value of taxable property. Boston would not seem big if there were not another debt not included in the city auditor's computation. That is the debt owed by Boston, and that is what is known as the State contingent debt. It is the debt for metropolitan water and sewerage works, parks, charles river basin metropolitan sewers and other work for beautifying the district about Boston, but in many cases not included in the city's report. The total so reached the enormous total of $70,321,412.

Debt on Boston.

The State has given its credit for this loan, but it expects not only interest but its responsibility for payment. Boston pays various proportions of these debts, but a fair average of Boston's share would be about fifty per cent. This would place the amount Boston owes of the State contingent debt at $35,000,000, added to the $94,178,884.90 that Boston owes on the city and county debt, this makes about $130,000,000.

But that is not all that Boston owes. If the State should fail to pay its obligations the State could levy a tax for the State debt, would fall upon the cities, that is the people who live in the cities. Boston and the people are liable for the city debt, the State debt, and the State's $38,500,000. The sinking fund for the debt is $7,000,323, making a net state debt of $31,499,677. Boston pays about 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. of the whole State tax, making it a fair estimate that Boston is liable for one-third of the State's wealth and that it would have to pay for the State debt in the same proportion, in that case Boston's share would be $10,500,000.

Add to the previous debt of $130,000,000 and you have a total of $140,500,000.

Permanent Improvements.

To make the debtors more nearly exact the share of the sinking fund that has accumulated for the metropolitan fund in which Boston will share when that money is spent, should be the debt, should be counted in. The total now is a little over two million dollars. Boston, by its proportion, will profit about $5,000,000. Deducting that from the total leaves Boston's total debt a little more than $135,000,000.

Where did this money go? Again forecasting every quarter for special improvements and figuring in sinking fund moneys, was only $70,855,847.21 on January 1, 1891. Special issues outside the debt limit for special purposes approved by the State added $35,477,100 to the city's indebtedness. Then there is the Cochituate water debt, now amounting to $4,749,300, and the county debt, outside the city debt limit, of $3,105,000.

NEW TENOR HEARD IN THE FAREWELL OPERA PERFORMANCE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The first half of the season of opera ended yesterday with a spirited and admirable performance of "Il Trovatore." Cesare Formichi made his first appearance as the Count de Luna and the remainder of the cast was unchanged from previous performances.

Formichi has now been heard as the King of Ethiopia in "Aida," and Marcello in "La Boheme," and as the Count de Luna. He is a versatile and intelligent singer with a firm and imposing baritone voice, a fine method and ability to express emotion. His singing of the Count was the feature of the performance yesterday.

Caricco, the tenor, was better vocally than he has been since he joined the Boston company. He had good tone quality, full robust notes and was always tasteful. There are places in the part that are very pleasing.

Bonesgna was in excellent voice and sang splendidly. Guerrina Fabbri sang the music of Azucena with power and intensemess. She awakened real enthusiasm by her work in the final scene.

Lazzetti led with fire and energy and kept things moving at proper tempo.

The absurd finale to the second act, where the soldiers of Manrico and Leonora from Luna and his men outside the convent is musically more ridiculous than in most operas of the kind, because of the curtain descending on the chorus men pushing at doors and battle axes [illegible] Caricco takes Leonora between the opposing armies in making the escape, endangering the lady's life. Manrico narrowly escaped a stage fright attack one yesterday. So he could not see in this general that he should escape behind the lines of his own men instead of in front of them.

The dark changes of scene were made with difficulty. Between the first and second scenes of the third act one of the drops got stuck and it was several minutes before the stage was ready. While the stage was not dark enough to conceal this a difficulty from the audience. The curtain might just as well be dropped between these scenes.

LARGE NEW YEAR'S SALES OF REALTY

IMPORTANT DEALS C[illegible]

Marked Activity Is Shown in Business Centres and Suburbs

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

NEW YEAR'S DAY was ushered in to the real estate market with most auspicious, for the volume of trading was the largest of any day for many months and the transfers included properties in all parts of the city and suburbs, many of them of considerable importance [illegible]

The day was distinctive in the close of a week that was filled with the announcing of many important deals in the city proper and a good activity in trading in suburban properties. This marked activity in the market is looked on by brokers as a very hopeful sign of still [illegible]

BIG REALTY YEAR PROMISED FOR 1910

First Twelve Months a Record-Breaker in City and Suburbs

GAIN IN SALES OF ALL KINDS

Renewed Confidence Leads to Many Investments at the Brokers' Offices.

With reports of exceptional business from every branch of the real estate field and with brokers in every section satisfied with the measure of trading now falling to their lot, the year 1910 opens to the realty market with every outward and inward sign pointing to a still more successful year than that just closed.

The past year was a banner one in many respects, and [illegible] notwithstanding the pessimistic opinions [illegible] of pessimistic [illegible] year by [illegible] brokers and records of the transactions disprove these negative views [illegible] brokers are now [illegible]

Increase in Transfers.

In Suffolk County the records of Register of Deeds William F. A. Fitzgerald show a notable increase in transfers and mortgages and amounts of the latter over 1908. Other counties throughout the State also show a similar large gain and with the closing of the year those who did not at first believe in the stability of the market and the prospects of its return to a large and profitable business have since altered their views, and now all those who have any interest in this branch of business can be heard to remark on the tremendous changes for the better that have taken place.

The New Year's Debits and Credits

By Herbert Kaufman

(Copyright, 1909, by Herbert Kaufman.)

Again a year's sands have run through Time's year-glass; the old gentleman with the century-whitened beard and the eternal scythe has given it his millionth or so turn-over and started measuring out 1910.

Another year of hope and despair and wreck and success and happiness and failure and disaster and joy and sorrow. Twelve more months of unborn dangers and undeclared wars and unheralded pestilence—of potential forces whose unleashing may sweep another San Francisco to her knees or hurl two more world-powers at each other's throats. It may develop a mightier force than electricity or solve a harder problem than the air-ship or——it does mean a lot, eh, this New Year? And we're all making up our minds what we'd like to have and what we expect to earn and how much further we're going to advance and how much more money we're going to make, so that when we do turn the new leaf, we'll know exactly what to put down—we'll be wishing one another all the brightness and prosperity that we wish for ourselves, and, as usual, forget to review the old pages to see how the debits and credits stand.

Have you the courage to take off the blinders of conceit and self-deception, to lay aside the mask of hypocrisy and dare to know the truth as your deeds and impulses have written it on the old page? You don't need to be an expert accountant or an auditor in this sort of bookkeeping. It isn't a case of being technical, but of being honest with yourself.

How many lies have you told, the responsibility for which fell on somebody else's shoulders, while you (knowing it all the while) stood in the background and kept silent. Add them up and transfer the total to the new leaf you're turning. They're debts—debts of honor, just as the apologies you've delayed, because you haven't learned how to voluntarily acknowledge an error or to come of your own accord and own that you've misjudged.

You weren't sure of your facts every time that you censured Smith to Brown or criticised Jones to Wilson. You were careless more than once when you judged. More than once you smirched an innocent woman's name or stained a man's reputation; of course you didn't really mean to hurt—you were only hasty—but the impulse doesn't count—it didn't make the hurt less.

What are you going to do with all your debits? Down in your heart of hearts, do you believe the scheme of creation is right if you are granted happiness and good fortune with all these debts unpaid.

Make your resolutions, but remember Yesterday when you plan for To-morrow.

Give a little thought to repairs in the midst of your air-castle building.

THE LAND OF HEART'S DESIRE can't be reached with muddy feet—the roads are clean only for those who climb cleanly. Real success isn't the attainment of money or of fame, but the attainment of self-respect—the one thing in the world that's worth most and one of the few things that can't be bought, but only sold.

So you see, the best wish that you can make for the New Year is easiest to realize. It's all a matter of bookkeeping, of balancing the debit and credit column IN TIME.

Now's the Time

The longest life, when all is said,
Is hardly more than a brass pin head
When measured against the endless stretch
Of grim Eternity. Saint and wretch—
Beggar and plutocrat—seer and clown—
Bearer of misery—wearer of crown,
Lives but a moment, and then like the moth,
Into the black blind hereafter goes forth.
Men and worlds pass away,
Life and death share each day,
While you have meed of might,
Postpone no deed of right.
Burdens are there to shift,
Sorrows have you to lift.
Wounds by your hands to heal.
Deal well, while you may deal.
Hark, to the New Year's chime—
Now, Now, NOW, NOW'S the time.

Petition to Go to Legislature From the People of So. Framingham.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Jan. 1—A petition asking for a special town meeting to be held not later than January 20, has been filed with the selectmen. Accompanying the petition are four articles to be incorporated into the warrant for the meeting.

One of the articles calls for the presentation of reports of committees and town officers. Another asks that the town instruct the assessors to exempt, for the year 1910, the property of the petitioners. With a petition for legislation authorizing the town to do so, the assessors exempt property of persons who require the town to pay taxes on property of persons who require the town to pay taxes on property of persons who require the town to pay taxes on

New Hampshire Cloth Plant Observes First Legal New Year.

SOMERSWORTH, N. H., Jan. 1.—In spite of the efforts of the Somersworth Manufacturing Company to run its cotton mills to-day, the 2,000 employes were all let out as soon as they had received their pay in order that they might observe the first New Year legal holiday as ordered by the last Legislature.

The Great Falls Woolen Company, the Great Falls Hosiery, the shoe factories and other plants made no attempt to run on the first legal New Year holiday in the State.

The Queensbury Mills planned to run but the night crew did not show up for work, nor the day crew either.

The 2,000 employes of the Great Falls Manufacturing Company came to work at 6:30 as usual. The mill whistle sounded at 9 o'clock. As fast as every employe got to the mill gate he was sent home. By eleven o'clock the plant was vacant. The looms were stopped for lack of anyone to run them.

MILKMAN PROVES HERO.

Stops Team of Runaway Horses and Saves Lives of 6 Persons

Eye witnesses of his thrilling act are proclaiming Charles Corrigan, a Newton milkman, a hero, because of his bravery in saving Mrs. Warren Ellsworth of Jasper, Chesnutts avenue, her daughter, and four grandchildren from serious injuries yesterday afternoon when the Ellsworth horses ran away in Lower Main street, Waltham. The horses became frightened at an electric car. The driver lost control of the animals just as Corrigan, who was passing by at the time, jumped to the horses' bridle and stopped the pair. The plucky milkman was dragged fifty feet before he could stop the frightened horses.

2 AMERICAN BISHOPS TRY TO CONVERT ROYSTERERS OF THE RIVIERA

WIVES' DIPLOMATIC AID

Marquis de Castellane Reports a Joyous Conversation on "Art" with Madame Paquin.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Correspondent of the Boston American.
Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Jan. 1—We have at this time in the city two American prelates on a mission of great importance. Their names are Bishop Mackay-Smith of Pennsylvania and Bishop Lore of Maryland. And their mission, as I understand it, is nothing less than to convert all the people I have ever met to the Protestant religion.

But I have not said so to them. They have given their names, added to their hope to convert the Latins of Monte Carlo, to the Protestant branch of their wives.

Yet I may safely say that one must be a time an American woman decided to convert the Latin soul of the Monte Carlo Bishop. Had the good man only known that he would have led it far easier to bring the cannibals of the Fiji Islands into the fold.

The Bishop of Pennsylvania is a man of seconder in his work to his charming wife and daughter. Mrs. Peter accompanies her husband also. Those who profess frequent the opera or like entertain as well as preach. They are seen everywhere, and, as I said them, at least their voices and daughter sing. I saw them in a box at a performance of "Il Trovatore."

When the Bishops have finished with Nice and Monte Carlo they will take a tour of Italy, and their graces will Rome, where they will arrive during the Holy Week.

Rostand of American Stock.

The Three Rostands, father, mother and son, are all poets. Mme. Rostand has just published a poem of two hundred lines of Alexandrine verse. Two poems have been no small work for a woman who is known to be delicate physically but she chose her son for her hero, for in most always a hero is chosen by a mother to be able to sing the praises of her only son. She frankly avows that it is the joy of her life.

No doubt young Rostand is exceedingly clever. I understand he has also de trans lated his father's splendid work, "The Romancers," into English. His father wasn't content with the Academy honors, so he decided to try the Academy. He was a son of the most peaceable.

Rostand de Gerard Mother Rostand is one of the most beautiful and fascinating young women in Paris and is a favorite of the Faubourg St. Germain, and it is interesting to note that she is an American side to the Rose of Gerard Madame Gerard is a niece of Miss Addy of the founder of Girard College and as will she is related to the Girards of Philadelphia, one of the early pioneers who settled in what was then the wilds of Minnesota.

So this famous house of poets may rightly be said to have Kindship with America. The critics speak well of Rostand of Modern. Rostand is best poem. Some say it is superior to Cyrano, but my husband has ever written. This may be owing to the peril of a good critic, but it is indeed rare to find a poet of his, for no matter how successful he may be, he is the Muses.

During the course of an interview Madame Paquin remarked that success in dressmaking, some inspiration to nature for effects. I asked her what she had the reason for, how very low cut dresses so often were, as one sees on the stage. I in the houses of fashion people I even went so far as to ask.

"Because nature is like that," was the answer. "Because nature is like that. But the lady was only half right, I answer.

European-Malay Girls Beauties of the World

THE HAGUE, Jan. 1—A representative of the Dutch Government in the Dutch East Indies from Java has brought with him a collection of photographs exhibiting remarkable improvements in the looks of the children of Malay women married to Europeans.

The progress of European men and Malay women seems to be toward more beautiful offspring. The Malay women are not beautiful. Their feet are extremely small and their hands are delicate. Their waists would be the envy of any Parisian woman, their hands are of rare delicateness, their arms well shaped and they have the prettiest shoulders in the world.

The German explorer Finsch brings similar reports from New Zealand. He says that among the female descendants of Europeans and Maori women the majority are exquisitely beautiful. The Swedish explorer, Nordenskjold, says that the Greenland women have improved by intermarriage with Europeans.

INTRODUCING THE LASTIKOPS BANDLET IN A NEW Nemo TRIPLE-STRIP SELF-REDUCING CORSET

A New and Important Corset Invention Which Will Produce Far-Reaching Results

A Comfort and Blessing to Every Woman

IN fifteen years, the good judgment of American women has made the Nemo business the most important corset industry in the world. In celebrating our FIFTEENTH BUSINESS ANNIVERSARY, we wish to emphasize our appreciation of this universal recognition and liberal patronage by offering to the women of America—

ENTIRELY FREE OF ANY EXTRA CHARGE

—our new "Lastikops Bandlet," a very novel and valuable invention, which is embodied in our new Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, No. 522, the price of which is $5.00. This new corset, in material, shape, construction, finish and durability, is so far superior to any other corset in existence, that it is an exceptional value at that price, saying nothing about its wonderful new feature—the Lastikops Bandlet.

№522 $5.00

THE extra-long and tightly-laced corsets of the prevailing type have made necessary the wearing of elastic belts to secure proper hygienic support.

These belts have been widely recommended by physicians, but are not as generally worn as they should be, on account of their high price (from $5.00 to $25.00, and even more), and the fact that these appliances are more or less bulky, uncomfortable and inconvenient.

The Lastikops Bandlet

—does all that the best abdominal belt can do—and more! yet it is neither inconvenient nor uncomfortable, and, instead of being bulky, it is the greatest figure-reducer ever devised. It is a greatly improved form of a Reducing and Supporting Band; made of the new Lastikops Webbing, which, being slightly elastic, adjusts itself snugly to the curve of the abdomen, giving firm support from underneath, with even greater ease and comfort than has hitherto been attainable.

Dealers Everywhere Have Prepared for This "Anniversary Sale" by Securing Complete New Stocks of Nemos.

Nemo Corsets for Every Figure

Nemo Self-Reducing, $3, $4, $5, $8 and $10
"Makes Stout Women Slender"

Nemo Corsets for Slender and Medium Figures
"Back-Resting," "Military Belt," "Swan-Shape," $3 to $5

Every Nemo Corset is a patented specialty which does something for you that no other corset can do—there can be NO SUBSTITUTION.

Cupid, Busy at Opera, Beckons Toward Altar As Love Songs Lure

Boston's Proud, Prim, Proper Maids Are Learning the Gentle Art of Flirting, and a Wealth of New Charms Is Revealed as the Bonds of Old Time Conventions Are Broken by Society and New Era Dawns.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

THOUGH Cupid is the god of love, we're quite convinced since several [illegible] romances are being nourished at our operatic base. Engage[illegible] and [illegible] are rife and unless [illegible] matrimonial [illegible] to attest to [illegible] are other and less innocent [illegible] that of [illegible] at times are [illegible] by [illegible] over the tea cups

[illegible] is addicted to, and that under the [illegible] "converging" It may be the power which [illegible] the tropical warmth of the [illegible] is moving, but she is being [illegible] before [illegible] the ultra conventional creature we have known so [illegible] and winsomeness leave us wondering if the [illegible] criticism of being too "good to be true."

[illegible] blooming forth, a typical fairy princess, in her royal [illegible] coquetting behind her fan or over the huge bank of [illegible] would wonder if this is really the proud, [illegible] [illegible] But it is she—not the maid we have seen [illegible] radiantly lovely creature who has burst the bonds of [illegible] which so long kept her a prisoner and emerges [illegible] for [illegible] wellness and worshipers, for [illegible]

The [illegible] attracting most attention and having those who [illegible] to [illegible] wife of Cupid are, I'm certain, the [illegible] Sallie Thayer. Her brunette beauty makes her always the object of all observers. She's the last of the Thayer daughters and the most strikingly beautiful of them all, so her father's warning at the time her pretty blonde sister, Cornelia, married Count Mulkie, that she was not to even think of marriage for five years, was not taken so seriously by the [illegible] Sallie has a mind of her own, as might be expected from so [illegible] a daughter. She's the type of girl, who

"When she will, she will,
And you can depend on't
And when she won't, she won't,
And there's an end on't."

So just now we're watching patiently and awaiting the outcome

Many "Affairs" Seem Promised.

Another lively young girl who has everything at her command and whom one of our most prominent society bachelors and cotillion leaders is said to [illegible] the favor of Miss Burnham, who rarely fails to put in [illegible] appearance nights at the opera, and always in her [illegible] Not to [illegible] many other guests are there, is the aforementioned [illegible] there are other cases—or rather other girls—and [illegible] conditions current in subrosa are too numerous to mention. Among beauty of the smart set who attracts no end of admiring attention is the pretty blonde, Clemence Crafts, who towers far above the [illegible] men in her set save the one who pass her such devoted [illegible] striking couple they make, too, as they promenade about the [illegible] intermissions. Wednesday night Miss Crafts was [illegible] satin, trimmed with much heavy white lace about the [illegible] wore a necklace of pearls

Miss Crafts is the tallest girl in Boston society and her close second [illegible] handsome young matron, Mrs. Robb de Peyster Titus, [illegible] notable figure at the opera and who, Wednesday night, was [illegible] attractive in a gown of palest green satin with drapery of heavy [illegible] lace. Her hair is of the titian shade and she carries her extraordinary [illegible] with such grace and ease that she is at all times the center of attraction

That winsome little brunette matron, Mrs. Horace Stanton, was for a [illegible] Miss Crafts and her escort, and was looking especially well in a [illegible] gown of yellow satin with Alice blue velvet outlining the decolletage [illegible] of diamonds

Miss Jordan a Charming Hostess.

Last night the young Miss Dorothy Jordan, who yesterday served as [illegible] of honor and maids at the wedding of Miss Stackpole and Mr. Grant, [illegible] box as hostess in her father's well filled box on Wednesday night. Miss Jordan was in a most becoming frock of pompadour chiffon [illegible] and [illegible] lace. Mrs. George H. Stoddard, who in her handsome [illegible] velvet made a perfect foil for her pretty debutante daughter, Yvonne, in a rather unique gown of embroidered gray chiffon [illegible] a wreath of pale pink blooms banded her prettily done [illegible]

Mrs. [illegible] Minter was also in the Jordan box and fashionably [illegible] in black jetted chiffon.

Of all the debutantes present none were lovelier than Miss Dorothy, [illegible] in white lace over white satin.

Miss Rosamond Allen, one of the most attractive of the younger girls [illegible] the debutantes of recent years, was attractive in cerise satin and [illegible]

Mrs. [illegible] was a striking figure in cerise satin was Miss Rosamond Dixey, [illegible] into prominence when a few years ago she travelled through [illegible] [illegible] with a little pig as a pet. Miss Dixey was [illegible] Mrs. Richard H. Dixey, who wore a handsome gown of [illegible] satin

Mrs. Gordon Dexter, who was a guest in the Thayer box, was in deep [illegible] and diamonds. Mrs. George R. Fearing was in black satin, [illegible] to White Face, and Mrs. Matthew Luce in pale blue satin.

Deep Blue Velvet, Trimmed in Gold.

Mrs. Ryer Adam who was in Nile satin and diamonds, had as guests [illegible] Mrs. Rudolph Agassiz in deep blue velvet, trimmed with gold and Miss Lydia Mitchell in pale lilac chiffon.

Mrs. Rosamond Lodding was in white lace over white satin and was [illegible] her mother Mrs. Robert S. Bradley in black satin and pearls.

Mrs. Sidney Aimes, who is quite the loveliest of the younger matrons [illegible] her set, came with her husband and two young sons, and was charming in pale blue satin and diamonds.

Mrs. Benjamin C. Whitney was in black and her pretty debutante daughter in pale blue chiffon

Mrs. S. D. Warren was in black satin and Miss Katherine Warren wore [illegible] gray satin and chiffon; Mrs. Horace Stanton was in pale pink [illegible] and Miss Katherine Fay in white lace over white satin.

Mrs. Eben S. Draper entertained several guests in her box and wore a gown of white satin. Her jewels were diamonds.

Mrs. E. V. H. Thayer, Jr., wore white satin and white lace. Miss Mary Fay was with her cousin, Miss Rosamond Fay, whose blonde beauty was in striking contrast to her own brilliant brunette coloring. Miss Mary Fay wore Alice blue satin and pearls, while Miss Rosamond was in palest blue satin and white lace. Mrs. Moses Bradford was in lavender satin with handsome necklace of topaz and Mrs. James L. Putnam wore black satin with diamond clara and necklace of diamonds and pearls. Mrs. Charles L. ## Unconventional Photographs of Society Women of Boston

Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, who is one of the most thoroughly delightful of Boston's younger matrons is this year a leader in all the philanthropic events of the fashionables and is devoting most of her time this year to the numerous charita ble events which society always takes active part. Mrs. Bremer before her marriage was the well-known belle and beauty Miss Burrage. Mrs. Bremer, who is noted for the delightful hospitalities which she gives each year at her fine home on Marlboro street, spent the greater part of her Summer traveling through Europe and there gathered together some valuable trinkets for the various bazaars in which she has taken active interest this Winter. This photograph was made especially for the Sunday American.

HOLIDAY GUESTS MAKE MERRY AS OLD YEAR DIES

Country Houses Crowded and Dinners and Family Gatherings Prove Leading Feature of Last Week in 1909.

THE entertainments of the past week have consisted mostly of Christmas and coming-of-age parties, the members of the smart set have been spending holidays in town house or country home. The typical party was a family affair, however and relatives from far and near have been the principal guests. While children and the younger set do not make up the majority of the family relatives, they have played a very conspicuous part in the Christmas parties, the house parties and all the New Year's festivities, and holiday guests in a great many cases have meant at least a few of those who are not a year's time, thousands of miles.

Mr and Mrs. Alexander C. Bond of Brookline have been in Baltimore during the past week where they were members of an interesting house party which Mr Bond's sister, the Misses Bond gave at their residence on Bolton street. It was one of the largest family parties given in the city during the holidays, as it included members of the Bond family from many different sections of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Martin Lane and their little daughter, Miss Katherine Lane, have been entertaining at Hyde Park during the past week. Mr. Lane is a son of Professor and Mrs. Lane of Cambridge, well known in Boston society circles. Mr. Lane is a graduate of Harvard university and is now connected with the Old Colony Trust company.

Miss Margaret Preston Draper, daughter of Mr and Mrs. William Draper of Bogue Lake and Washington, will be the chief guest at a dinner which Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wainwright are to give at their residence in Washington on Jan. 11 in honor of the most attractive debutante of the season.

Miss Elizabeth Parsons of Columbus, Ohio, who is a niece of Mrs. William Howard Taft, arrived in Washington during the week to join the house party at the White House which is being given for Miss Helen Taft during her vacation from Bryn Mawr.

Mrs. T. James Bowker (nee Lowell) arrived from New York during the week to attend the wedding of her role Mrs. Miles Lyman Roosevelt was to now Mrs. James B. Shelley. Miss J. Stanley Rowe of Philadelphia, daughter of Mrs. Bowles, was also at the wedding.

Among Lawrence of this city is in Washington for a visit at the home of Mrs. L. Z. Tello, who is giving a small house party at her residence there. The other guests are Mrs. Hubbard of Oakland, Mr and Mrs. Joseph Letter and Seymour Morris of Chicago.

Mr and Mrs. Francis Cunningham of who have gone to Washington recently for the Winter, assisted Senator Dupont, Mrs. Cunningham's father, in giving a large house party at his Delaware residence during the week.

Mrs. Lemoir Insigl and her daughter, Miss Nora Insigl, Attorney-General and Mrs. Malone, and Mr. and Mrs. H Stanley Pat ter are among the Bostonians who are visiting in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. J Scott Barclay, Jr (nee Hennessey) are at their country house in Hennessy, N J, now closed and have been entertaining a house party there during the past week.

Mr and Mrs Chester W Lowell have been at their country place, Oakhurst, for the holidays and have been entertaining a number of jolly house parties of the younger set

Mr and Mrs. J Sullivan Talbot have received invitations for the second Baltimore assembly which will be given in Baltimore on Thursday evening, January 13.

Mr and Mrs. Frank Merriam of Longmeadow evening have been entertaining Mrs. Merriam's sister, Mrs. H. E. Howland of Bangor, at their home.

Many Boston People Are Entertained at Washington.

BOSTON Washington and New York have been in the minds of our younger set during the week to some of the large and fashionable social functions during the winter sets of these cities have been giving and which have been attended by Boston youth and maidens who happen to be there at either the capital or the metropolis this season or have been able to go on to these cities and spend the holidays and so be present at some of the most important society affairs of the nation

Quite a number of the younger members of the set went from Boston to New York Wednesday evening for the fashionable dance which Mrs. Whitney Warren of 5 Sherry's for her two daughters, the Misses Dorothy and Raimond Burr. There was general dancing during the early part of the evening and later there was a cotillion, which was led by Harry Aiken, Jr. Among the guests were Miss Barbara Burr, Miss Leslie Bradley, Miss Anne Thayer, Miss Ruth Dickerson, Miss Evelyn Witherspoon, Miss Jean Whitridge, Miss Greta Foster, Miss Dorothy Kane, Miss Julia Loomis, Miss Mary Morgan, Miss Helen Coats, Miss Rose O'Neil Hyde, Miss Margaret Gould, Miss Dorothy Fullerton, Miss Virginia Arcandre, Miss Gladys Roosevelt, Miss Jean Roosevelt, Miss Emily Sinnott, Miss Dorothy Smith, Miss Dorothy Fullerton, Miss Beatrice Pratt, Miss Laura Emmett, Miss Catherine L. Hamersley, Miss Edmund Rodewald, Miss Leslie Pearson, Miss Annemieka Kane, Miss Josephine Delmar, Miss Katherine H. Tilford, Miss Ellen Farnsworth, Courtland P. Dixon, Harry Morgan, Nat Cross, C. Suydam Cutting, Howland Shaw, Langdon Marvin, Jr., Stanley Drayton, Arthur Mason Jones, George B. Wagstaff, Hector K. Kampis, Jr., Henry Rigney, Richard Whitney, Valentine Mandelick, Tucker Burr, Jr., Francis H. Burr, Curtis Burr, Jr., Gavin Hadden, Alfred Greenleaf, Sherman Day, Vicente de Pedro y Ayuso and Hamilton Fish. Refreshments were served in the small ballroom after the dance, the favors being silver vanity purses, crystal bonbonnieres, paper weights and a variety of Christmas novelty favors.

Wednesday evening was the banner night ever in the history in Washington for the set of the land. Miss Helen Taft, the daughter of President and Mrs. William Howard Taft, for two of the largest and most important dances of the season. One of the younger set were given, both of them practically by Boston people, the young Miss Mabel Boardman, who is so well known here when she was a visitor at Winthrop Murray Crane of Dalton and Washington, was one of the hostesses, while the other was Mrs. James C. Pilling. As the guests had been invited to meet Miss Taft and her brother, Robert Taft, those young people had to arrange to be at both dances. Besides Miss Taft and Robert Taft and their guests at the White House, who are Miss Eleanor Roeber, Miss Billie both Parsons and R. A. Wodell, there were over one hundred guests at both dances. When, several weeks ago, the invitations for the two dances on the same night were received at the White House, Mrs Taft planned that the two parties be united and dance at the White House where it was arranged that a dinner should be given for all the young people. Death of Mrs. Horace Taft occurred in the meantime, however, and the invitations in the White House were recalled, and the plans were carried out as had been planned originally.

Miss Boardman's dining-room and ballroom were beautifully decorated with holly and Christmas greens. Miss Boardman received in the receiving line and was gowned in black velvet. Among the guests were many of the younger members of the various diplomatic corps and a large number of army and navy officers.

At the Colonial Dames' Club, where Mrs Pilling entertained, there were also many from a hundred guests, many of whom besides the guests of honor were at the other party. Some of the young people present were Miss Alice Meyer, Miss Julia Meyer, Miss Margaret Draper, Miss Laura Merriam, Miss Caroline Murray, Miss Sadie Murray, Miss Marjorie Aldebire, Miss Reed, Miss Carol Newberry, Miss Blake, Miss Marie Murphie, Miss Ann Irwin, Miss Mary Irwin, Miss Katherine Weeks, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Marion Oliver, Miss Eleanor Ridgely, Miss Frances Webster, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Miss Mary Southerland.

NEW YEAR OPENS WITH STRONG ARRAY OF NEW PLAYS ON BOSTON STAGE

BY FELIX ST. CLAIR.

IF the great American public would kindly lift its right hand and swear to keep the following New Year's resolution the theatrical world would be greatly obliged

"Resolved, that at least once a week we shall indulge in innocent recreation by attending the theatre and taking the whole family with us, and when we like a play we shall tell all our friends about it and persuade them to go."

If the public would agree to this there would not be so many actors out of work.

However, the New Year brings a number of excellent shows to Boston, and they should have no difficulty in drawing big houses. There is John Drew at the Hollis in "Inconstant George," "Dick Whittington" at the Majestic, William Hodge in "The Man from Home" at the Park, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" with Edith Taliaferro at the Tremont, new bills at Keith's and the American Music Hall, "Sal, the Circus Girl," a whacking melodrama, at the Grand Opera House; "1915" at the Castle Square, and the hold-overs are Margaret Anglin at the Colonial, "Bright Eyes" at the Boston and "The Wolf" at the Globe.

A new theatre opens its doors to-morrow night. It is Waldron's Casino, the largest and finest temple of burlesque in the United States. This makes four houses devoted to this type of entertainment in Boston.

The kids of this generation ought to be very happy all the time. Think of the wonderful amusements which have been invented especially for children during the last twenty years. I remember, when a very small boy, running across a little book entitled "Six Popular Tales." It contained the stories of "Bluebeard," "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Beauty and the Beast," "Tip Top" or "My Thumb," "Jack, the Giant Killer" and "Dick Whittington," and of them all I liked "Dick Whittington" the best.

The children of to-day can see these wonderful stories told on the stage amid the most miraculous effects. Fairyland actually exists for our youngsters. We had to create it for ourselves. But when the Drury Lane extravaganzas, "Beauty and the Beast," "Mother Goose," etc., came to Boston those of us who are no longer children enjoyed them nearly as much as the youngsters.

The latest Drury Lane extravaganza, "Dick Whittington," which has been arranged for the American stage and comes to the Majestic to-morrow, is said to be the most elaborate scenic production that the Shuberts have ever evolved. There is a splendid cast, containing Irene Dillon, Louise Dresser, Kate Ellinor, Alexander Clark, Laura Guerite and many others.

The wonderful story of how Dick Whittington and his cat rise from poverty to great wealth and how Whittington becomes Lord Mayor of London is most delightfully told.

OH, YOU GIRLS! JOHN DREW IS HERE!

Oh, girls! do you know who has come amongst us? John Drew. Yes, he has quite recovered from his equestrian mishap which caused the closing of "Inconstant George" in New York in the middle of every successful season and, as it is an ill wind which blows nobody good, we get a chance to see him earlier than we otherwise should.

In "Inconstant George" Mr. Drew actually wears clothes which do not fit him, which were cut for somebody else. Some of the New York matinee girls thought that this might have made him despondent and caused the accident, but, as a matter of fact, Mr. Drew likes to wear clothes that are not perfect occasionally, in order to contrast with the perfect garments which he will afterward don.

In "Inconstant George" Drew is a male flirt. An innocent country girl—oh, so innocent—decides that she wants him and tries to grab him. His endeavors to avoid the net and her efforts to land him make a very humorous play. Guess how it comes out.

Among other tricks, the lady pretends to be in love with somebody else and displays a picture of her fiance. In New York Drew recognized the picture as a photograph of Wilbur Wright, the aeronaut, which proved the lady has bought it. But Mr. Wright saw the play and then wrote Charles Frohman, saying: "My attention has been called to the fact that my name is being used in connection with a supposititious love affair. Such things are a little out of my line, so please substitute some other name." As a result Wilbur Wright has been replaced by William Gillette.

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" is said to be a rural drama that is different. There is no missing marriage certificate. There is no snow storm during which the erring one knocks in vain at the door of the old homestead. There is no cruel parent. There is no New York scene with the farmer waddling around the parlor of a Fifth avenue residence in his stockinged feet. In fact, none of the ingredients believed necessary for a rural drama are incorporated in this dramatized novel of Kate Douglas Wiggin.

The heroine is a very young girl, almost a child, who comes to dwell with two maiden ladies at Sunnybrook Farm and brings sunshine into their lives. How she dominates them, the rural neighbors and her play companions are most charmingly portrayed. And that dainty, demure little actress, Edith Taliaferro, who is herself only seventeen years old, ties her hair in a braid—it has only been done up a few months anyway—and plays Rebecca.

* * * * * * *

And now comes the Hoosier dramatist with an offering for our approval. Boston is not jealous of Indiana and her claim to literary supremacy, because she doesn't pay any attention to those claims, but she gladly welcomes "The Man from Home," which is the work of Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, and which introduces William Hodge as a star.

"MAN FROM HOME" TO VISIT US.

"The Man from Home" has had a very successful career, as it ran for seventy weeks in New York. In Daniel Voorhees Pike—that's the Hoosier of it—Hodge has a splendid role. According to the story he is the guardian of two children, Orren of Jim Eppingwell, who go abroad and become engaged to marry Daniel, "The Man from Home," goes over to Europe and rescues them from a swarm of fortune hunters, annexing the girl for himself.

* * * * * * *

"Bright Eyes," the latest Gaites show, has made good at the Boston, in spite of its bad start as a result of the storm last Monday. From Philadelphia to Boston is a long jump, anyway, but the "Bright Eyes" people had to make it during the greatest storm in 25 years.

Morris Uri, the manager, tells in a vivid manner how he stormed at the Pennsylvania railroad until the officials consented to send his company out on a special train. Part of the company piled into a day coach ahead of the baggage car and the principals took seats in a Pullman in the rear. Uri went forward into the day coach to wake up his chorus and see that none had been left behind. The train started while he was talking with the chorus people, and when he started back to the Pullman he found to his amazement that it wasn't there. The railroad men had dropped it because it was too heavy.

Uri had all the money and the tickets. He realized that the crowd in the Pullman were probably all broke, and he got out at the next stop and wired back to Philadelphia to have them taken care of. The wires were down, and the message was never delivered. Lean, Holbrook and the other principals were compelled to pool all their resources to get enough money to buy tickets to New York, as the railroad wouldn't transport them free. Of course, the manager was able to get their money refunded after they arrived in New York. But there wasn't enough money in the crowd to buy anything to eat during the trip to New York, and when they finally reached the big town they were very, very hungry.

Alice Baxter, the charming leading woman of "The Wolf" company, is an ex-newspaper woman and her own press agent. It is a shame to give it away, but the following notice was written by Miss Baxter herself, and I have her manuscript copy to prove it:

"Miss Ann Baxter, who plays the only woman role in 'The Wolf,' Eugene Walter's picturesque play of the primitive Canadian wilds at the Globe Theatre, was a newspaper woman before she adopted the stage as a profession. It was in Detroit that the histrionic bug began devouring my peace of mind," said Miss Baxter, in speaking of her stage debut. The bugling grew apace until everything new in literature highbrow, and I sought an interview with George Goodale, the veteran dramatic critic of the Detroit Free Press, hoping that out of his wisdom he might give me some help or value de advice. He did. He asked me to go on with my newspaper work. But the call of the stage was strong within me and when I left Mr. Goodale I was armed with a letter of introduction to the manager of the Pike Stock company. Mr. Goodale advised me to begin at the bottom, and told me to take anything I was offered in order to get in. So I did. For a week. After I had been with the stock company only a few weeks my brother took me to Paris, where he had business interests, and while my active stage work was interrupted for over a year, I took the opportunity of seeing all the great French actresses, and studied for a time with a member of the Comedie Francaise company, after which the New Theatre I studied. On my return I joined Louis Mann in 'Julie Bon Bon,' and the next season found me in 'The Lion and the Mouse.' This is my second season with 'The Wolf.'"

New York has poked so much fun at Boston's informal manner of attending the theatre that we have been led to believe that Gothamites all own dress clothes and invariably wear them to the play. Therefore the naive admission on the part of the New Theatre that Manhattanites are not always worn after 6 p. m. is rather amusing. This is what the New Theatre press agent says:

"In some unaccountable way the public received the impression shortly after the New Theatre opened that patrons occupying front seats or orchestra seats were expected to wear full evening dress. Owing to the adjective 'full' are there variants of evening dress in New York? This error has led to several unusual and humorous incidents. Then the press agent tells about a Western man who came in evening attire, but when his lady friends showed up they were in street dress. Thereupon the man, who had his shirt, clothes in a suit case with him, was allowed to use the manager's private office to change back into a sack suit.

It wouldn't be surprising if the manager of the Opera House in Waterford, Me., had proffered his private office as a dress for Miss Anglin when she arrived there on her way from Portland, but the manager of the aristocratic New Theatre of New York, being so condescending as to revise our ideas of the self-styled metropolis.

* * *

The stately Margaret Anglin is described as a very unconventional person in the second act of "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie." She is sitting in a small attic studio. The scene of a property supposedly belonging to Miss Anglin rouses much interest, and one can see upstate, south and east who are using their "dear old attics" for the fast-mounting fad for studio parties. Miss Anglin and her company will be found in the attic scene, and the curious are invited to see the works of the dramatic artist who is not literary, but might indulge in a few ideas.

* * *

One reason why there are so many plays of domestic morals is that the literary dramatist can't think of anything else to write about. Now, if the dramatist could be interesting or exciting, he would probably be too popular to associate and see the work of the dramatic artist who is not literary, but might indulge in a few ideas.

* * *

There is no sympathy for women in the delightful morals at the Grand Opera House. They cannot be made heroines because the audience won't stand for it. If married from dwelling upon marital infidelity the drama insists that we go to sea, and get their effects by convention. The story of a poor but honest working girl who goes with a circus troupe into the employ is shown in a circus tent with performance going on, a realistic merry-go-round, during the progress of which the action of the piece continues. So far as I can tell all right, but how she is to perform it only the actors need apply for the job of heroine in a melodrama.

* * *

Mabel Hite is to be a star. Fact. Another leading man is to assume other than our old friend Mike Donlin, as "hottest attraction going." The name of the play is to be "A Certain Party," a round from the pen of Edward W. Townsend and Frank Ward O'Malley.

There were a lot of loom people who said that Mike and Mabel would be divorced out as a result of his refusal to join the Giants at the beginning of last season and assist them in getting the pennant away from the Cubs. Instead [illegible] at Long Mabel is a star, Mike is a baseball player and Mike is her satellite, which is another name for a moon.

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Hollis.

John Drew makes his first appearance on the stage since his accident three weeks ago. He starts in "Inconstant George," said to be a delightful comedy full of bright lines and amusing situations.

Majestic.

"Dick Whittington," the Shubert's adaptation of the Drury Lane extravaganza, opens to-morrow night. Lavish scenery, beautiful bands, pretty choruses and clever principals, who include Louise Dresser, Irene Dillon and Alexander Clark.

Park.

William Hodge in "The Man From Home" opens to-morrow. The play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson had a splendid run of seventy weeks in New York and is said to be comedy and afford Hodge the opportunity of his career to be amusing and yet effective.

Tremont.

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," a play adapted from the books of Kate Douglas Wiggin, and with a cast headed by Edith Taliaferro, the charming seventeen-year-old actress, who has been starring in "Polly of the Circus."

Keith's.

American Music Hall.

Byron and Langdon, in the "Trade Detective"; Karno's Comedy Company, presenting "A Night in the Slums of London"; the Georgia Campers, the Jackson Family and a full fun-a-go to the Morton standard drawing card.

Colonial.

Margaret Anglin, in "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie," begins her second week. The Dr. Lavender of Dr. Lyddy has caused admirers of Miss Anglin to laud the work of Miss Anglin to a great drawing card.

Boston.

"Bright Eyes," that merry musical comedy in which Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook are amusing big audiences, begins its second week. Those who saw it last week pronounced it a worthy successor to the "Three Twins."

Globe.

"The Wolf," Eugene Walter's stirring play of the Canadian woods, begins its second week at the Globe. Those who have seen "The Wolf" say that it is fully as thrilling and entertaining as "Paid in Full."

Castle Square.

"1915" has been pronounced desirable and begins its second week. The favorites in the company have advantageous parts and the songs are already being whistled about town.

Grand Opera House.

"Sal, the Circus Girl," is the melodrama at this popular playhouse this week. It tells of the trials and sufferings of a sweet young girl, who is obliged to [illegible]

Waldron's New Casino.

The new playhouse throws open its doors to-morrow afternoon with [illegible] which are said to be the largest burlesque show on the road. The [illegible] a traveling which could be [illegible] The company comprises sixty people, [illegible] Smythe, Magda Duhl and others.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Howard Athenaeum.

It is another big show that comes to the Howard Monday. A stronger burlesque attraction would be difficult to find than the "Kentucky Belles," one of the best big shows of the Western circuit. The [illegible] will be [illegible] and the [illegible] are [illegible] supplied to present a high class program.

Columbia.

There will be some lively doings at the Columbia this week when the "Follies of the Day" take possession of the reins of that pretty playhouse. The jolly chorus ladies is still a member of the company, and so is Larry McCale. A wrestling bout is on the card for Wednesday night and on Friday night the [illegible] will be [illegible]

Gaiety.

The Ben Ten Burlesquers are the attraction at the Gaiety this week. This is a very nifty bunch of dancers, singers and comedians, and they are warranted to keep things moving at a lively pace.

Scenic.

The Scenic Temple celebrates its annual [illegible] by the finest bill in its history of vaudeville moving pictures and illustrated song. The Lenna Howe Woman's Orchestra is still a feature.

Comique.

"UNCLE JOSH" IS BACK.

Denman Thompson Will Come to Keith's in His Old Sketch.

Denman Thompson, twenty-eight years [illegible] has never been [illegible] as much as he will be next week at Keith's. It was [illegible] ago, more than twenty-five, in fact, he was in Nashville to open the [illegible] But this is stupid. [illegible] Josh Whitcomb [illegible] from [illegible] and [illegible] organized, [illegible] years ago became a Thompson [illegible] and his declining days [illegible] He had amassed enough of the world's pelf to be comfortable, and looked forward to delightful ease.

"I had enough of this kind of life," he declares, "I want action and life." So he decided to take his old-time sketch and go into vaudeville. A three-hour show had begun to tire him, but the twenty-minute playlet will be pie for the veteran of the stage.

MISS DRESSER ASKS ANTI-PEROXIDE LAW

"I'm a Real Blonde," Says Fair Louise, "and These Imitators Just Make Me Mad!"

When a lady in a real blonde it is very annoying to have a bunch of imitation blondes crowding the delegation that belongs to her, especially as the foolish ones are just as apt to think the real blonde is the imitation as they are to pick out the genuine.

Miss Louise Dresser is the subject of the above remarks, and she is decidedly in favor of a law to prohibit any woman with the big yellow switch from appearing in public at the Midwinter Fair.

"I was walking along the street the other day," said Miss Dresser, "and I heard some one behind me say: 'Look at that peroxide blonde.' Wondering what in the world I had done to be called a peroxide blonde, I looked around and saw that I had passed a girl with a head of hair that didn't look like it had ever seen the sun. I felt like telling her that I was a real blonde, and that my hair was the envy of a lot of girls who were trying to dye their hair to look like mine.

"Then, as I was to present the sale of a new hair tonic a few days later, I decided right then and there that I would not only use it myself, but would tell every woman I met about it. I am not going to say what it is, because I don't want to be accused of advertising, but I will say that it is the best thing I have ever used for the hair, and I am willing to back my opinion with my money.

"If Mrs. Grundy wants to make a law prohibiting the use of peroxide, I am willing to help her, but while the law is on the statute books I intend to use it myself, because I am a blonde, and I mean to remain one. I am not going to be classed with those people to the north and south of me who are trying their best to look like something they are not."

Miss Dresser is present the sale of the new hair tonic at the Midwinter Fair, which is now being held in New York, and next week she will be in Boston, appearing at the Colonial.

COMING EVENTS

ALAN DALE REVIEWS NEW PLAYS; SAYS "NEXT OF KIN" IS AIMED AT THE GALLERY

Nance O'Neil Is Given High Praise for Her Exceptionally Powerful Acting in "The Lily" and Takes Rank as One of the Really Great Actresses of Modern Times; Her Strength Branded Notable.

NEW plays presented in New York have either already been seen in Boston or else they soon will be seen here. As a rule Boston theatregoers are deeply interested in what is being produced at the New York theatres. Alan Dale, the noted critic, has written the following reviews of new plays for the Sunday American:

Don't Be Afraid to Weave a New Pattern

IF you, Mr. Reader, are like ninety-nine men in a hundred, the New Year means opportunity to you. New Year's Day is one of sixty or more marks in a lifetime. Get the idea out of your head that New Year's resolutions are useless because they are never kept. They can be kept. Moreover, many a man who began life on the downward road has, by virtue of such a resolution, pulled himself together and made a new start, thereby amounting to something after all.

Perhaps your old way of doing things was all right. But it is worth while to think it over.

Has it brought you prosperity or peace of mind?

Are you doing the best work you CAN do?

Are you getting all out of your capacities that they are capable of?

Is there no folly you can drop; no harmful habit you can reform?

Beware of contentment with things as they are. Beware of jogging along in the same old way, when there are many better ones open to you.

The cartoonist has here pictured a Navajo Indian, whose wonderful blankets have found their way all over the world, and everywhere excite admiration and wonder.

In fashioning his blanket the Indian is continually changing the pattern, IMPROVING on the design he at first had in mind, weaving in new figures and new colors.

His way of working is very different from the modern way. In the great mills where wonderful fabrics are made the designs are first made by skilful men, whose work is taken up by others and fitted to the looms. The operative only has to run the loom; the machinery does the weaving.

But the making of blankets, like the making of the wonderful Gobelin tapestries of France, calls for INDIVIDUALITY.

The blanket weaver often sees an opportunity to do better work than he has been doing. And when such an opportunity is offered it is improved.

A bad start does not spoil the blanket. Until the work is nearly completed there is time to add new touches and weave in new shades that add novelty and variety to the completed work.

Study that Indian and what he is doing, and see how the life work of a man or a woman may be modelled upon it.

As you go through life you are constantly weaving an intricate design, which when completed will be your CHARACTER.

You may easily look back upon what you have done, and if you are not eaten up by conceit you can see the mistakes you have made in it.

Look back and see where the pattern has been marred by misweaves. See the clashing shades, the false blending of traits that never should enter into the same character.

At this time of year, when the new year stretches away like the threads on the loom, no pattern yet woven, no design yet shaped, it will be worth your while to look back at the patterns of other years and to resolve to do better.

Part of your life is behind you, as a standard of comparison. It is impossible that you should be satisfied with it unless you are content to stand still while the rest of the world sweeps by.

Look at the warp and the woof of it; look at the blending of the colors; FIND THE MISTAKES, and in the new work that you are about to do avoid them carefully.

Of course, making a new start does not necessarily mean changing a pattern altogether or abandoning the old if it is uncompleted.

Begin the New Year by Doing the Old Work Better and Redeeming the Faults of the Past.

But on the first of January a new year is ahead of you; you can make it the kind of a year you want it to be if you are willing to work harder and more earnestly than you have before.

There are few men who have not plans that they have deferred, ideas that they hope some day to carry out, work that they mean to learn to do better.

What such men need is a start, but as long as they continue doing things the old way, piling procrastination upon procrastination, they will never make it.

Supposing that you are a bookkeeper. Continue keeping books as you have always kept them, and you will always be a bookkeeper at a bookkeeper's wages.

But just ahead of you there is a better job, and ahead of that a better one still.

In a year you can qualify for both those better jobs.

It will mean hard work, studying at home at night when you would rather be going to the theatre or playing billiards with some of your friends.

You must sacrifice what you call pleasure. You must be ready to decline opportunities for amusement.

But at the end of the year you will be prepared for a better place, and if there is no opening where you are you can find another.

It is the good men that employers want—the men that can fill the better-paid positions. Any of them can find plenty of "regulars"—men who will do the old work in the same old way.

But the man who wants to do better work is the man who makes money for his firm or his boss. And when hard times drive the commonplace out of their rut into a deeper one the man who is not afraid to make a new start is secure in his position.

The best habit a young man can acquire is that of saving. Begin to save the first of January. It will be hard at first. But it will be easier as your savings begin to grow. Put aside a little out of every week's pay and store it in a bank. And at the end of the year, whether you have saved a hundred or a thousand dollars, you will feel that you are gaining, which is far better than most men can do.

The capacity of almost every man is greater than his achievement. Most men accomplish about 25 per cent of what they might accomplish. Not even the greatest men do the best work they could do. An average of 80 per cent of accomplishment would be high.

In this coming year you can resolve to make at least that 80 per cent—and possibly more. Your capacities may not be great, but if you make the most of them you will surpass many men who may be far more talented.

Resolve to try to do that through the next year. Then cling to your resolve, and twelve months will give you a start that will redeem the fabric of your character, and make the world forget the mistakes you have made in the past.

Do not forget that the world, which means the world of your friends and acquaintances, as well as those who know you only through your work, can see what you are doing.

The fabric called character stands out in clear relief—the errors—the errors as plain as the successes. No one will be deceived by covering up or patching; it is only the good, new, careful work that will count.

Let the work of 1910 far surpass the work of 1909, however good that work may have been.

Get out of your talents all that there is in them. It is the only way to prove that you are worthy to have them.

Lord Curzon or the Dashing Capt. Montague Parker?—Which will Win Mrs. Astor?

LORD CURZON

NEWEST PORTRAIT OF MRS JOHN JACOB ASTOR

CAPT MONTAGUE PARKER OF THE LIFE GUARDS

SOCIETY hears persistent reports that the beautiful Mrs. John Jacob Astor, her matrimonial troubles ever and shortly marry the choice of [illegible] years. The one most generally de[illegible] the fortunate man is Captain the Hon. Montague Browulow Parker, of England, brother of the Earl of Morley, although no certainty is expressed at present

Captain Parker is an officer of the Life Guards, that magnificent body of picked men in steel cuirasses and scarlet and gold uniforms, who form the King's first escort on public occasions. He is what the late Ouida would term a "beau sabreur," and he is only thirty-one years old.

Altogether he is just the type of man one would expect to please a beautiful American divorcee of cosmopolitan tastes, accustomed to gratify every inclination. The fortune of ten million dollars which it is understood Mrs. Astor received from her husband on obtaining her divorce must appear very attractive to a young man in Captain Parker's position—the younger son of an Earl, without great wealth and possessed of a taste for exploration, social leadership and other expensive pastimes.

The fortune which Mrs. Astor received on her divorce was not in the nature of alimony, as her lawyer explained, but was paid by private arrangement, entirely apart from her divorce, and is understood to be entirely at her own disposal, subject to no regulations of the court and to no restrictions concerning her remarriage. She will, of course, not remarry until her divorce is made absolute, but that is only a matter of a few months.

For some years past Mrs. Astor has been in the habit of spending a large part of every year in England. She has been a conspicuous figure at the most brilliant entertainments of the London season, at court, at "Royal Ascot" and elsewhere. The most interesting and distinguished men in the British aristocracy are among her friends, and it is only natural that one of them should aspire to win her hand, now that she is free.

Among those who have enjoyed her friendship besides Captain Parker is the widowed Lord Curzon, whose wife was Miss Victoria Leiter, of Washington. But Lord Curzon, though clever and interesting, is now a valetudinarian, with an extremely sour temper, and it does not seem probable that a woman of Mrs. Astor's vigor and liveliness could accept such a man.

In the meantime Mrs. Astor has taken up her residence in England, where there is little doubt she will spend most of her time in future. She has leased a house at No. 34 Hill street, Berkeley Square, London, belonging to the Marquis Camden.

It may seem curious that just before Mrs. Astor went to England Captain Parker went away to the Holy Land. According to one account Mrs. Astor told the Captain last Spring that he would be more interesting if he did some more serious work than standing about in uniform.

So he went away, and is hunting for the lost treasures of King Solomon in the quarries beneath and outside the walls of Jerusalem. This work, apart from the possible recovery of treasure, is of world-wide archaeological interest.

A GIANT DINOSAUR STILL ALIVE?

"Not Impossible That Some Type of Prehistoric Monster May Have Survived," Says Prof. Matthew of the American Museum of Natural History (New York), Commenting on the Strange News From South Africa.

Skeleton of the 80-foot Diplodocus, the greatest known four-legged animal.

Clay Restoration of the Huge Naosaurus.

A most circumstantial report of the existence of a monster, hitherto supposed to be extinct, has just been brought to civilization.

It is clearly possible that unknown monsters may still be in existence. In Africa a large animal, the okapi, until recently unknown, has been discovered, and in South America remains of the giant sloth have recently been found, indicating that these creatures lived in historic times, if not still existing.

It is also significant that Professor W. D. Matthew, of the American Museum of Natural History of New York, in a statement printed elsewhere on this page, expresses his opinion that it is not impossible that some monsters commonly regarded as extinct may have survived.

The report of the existence of the new monster originated with Carl Hagenbeck of Hamburg, the most successful hunter and trainer of wild beasts in the world, and it has just received some remarkable additional confirmation.

In his newly published book, "Beasts and Men," Hagenbeck, in a chapter describing his experiences in South Africa, says:

"I received reports from two distinct sources of the existence of an immense and wholly unknown animal, and I at once built the interest of Rhodesia. Almost identical stories reached me, both through one of my own travelers, and secondly, through an English gentleman who had been shooting big game in Central Africa.

"The reports were thus quite independent of each other, and, as a matter of fact, both Englishman and my traveler had made their way into Rhodesia from opposite directions, the one from the north-east and the other from the south-west. By natives it seemed, had told both men precisely that in the depth of the great swamps there dwelt a huge monster, half land and half water. This, however, is but the only likeness of the description to the animal.

"It is now several decades since Baengus, who is, of course, perfectly reliable, heard a precisely similar story from the natives and, still more remarkable, on the walls of certain caverns in Central Africa there are to be found actual drawings of this strange creature. From what I have heard of the animal it seems to me that it can only be some kind of dinosaur, some high akin to the brontosaurus. As my stories come from so many different sources, I feel myself convinced that some such creature does, in fact, exist.

"At great expense and many hardships, my men and I, after an exhaustive search, were compelled to return home without having proved anything either one way or the other. In the part of Africa where the animal is said to exist there are enormous swamps and hundreds of square miles in extent, and my travelers were laid low with very severe attacks of fever. Moreover, the region is infested with inordinately savage, and apparently aggressive, [illegible] advance.

"Notwithstanding this failure, I have not relinquished the hope of being able to present science with indisputable evidence of the existence of this monster, and perhaps if I succeed in this enterprise naturalists will be willing to withdraw the adjectives so freely bestowed on me [illegible] unknown animals, for if the [illegible] dinosaur, which is supposed to have been extinct for thousands of years, can be said to exist, why should not other species be said to exist, also, which [illegible]?

This statement was received with incredulity by scientists, and the zoological department of the Rhodesia Museum declared that nothing could be gathered from the [illegible] respecting the alleged monster.

The Chronicle, the principal newspaper of Bulawayo, the capital of Rhodesia, however, immediately received more than one communication from its correspondents on the subject.

One correspondent stated that he had found two natives, both of whom affirm in the most positive manner that they had seen the monster.

"Several of the natives knew of other [illegible] the correspondent wrote. "I was shown a number of sketches, some wholly imaginary and others constructed from illustrations of prehistoric reptiles, and both immediately picked out of the sketches as closely resembling the animal they had seen. [illegible] the attention of the [illegible] to the fact that I had omitted to have in his sketches what from the description appeared to be prominent features. The natives, it seems, were unable to possess the head and tail of a crocodile, the horns of a rhinoceros, the neck of the python and the body of a hippopotamus."

This description bears a considerable resemblance, after allowing for the mistakes of an unsophisticated observer, to the scientific accounts of the supposedly extinct brontosaurus.

The brontosaurus derives its name from two Greek words meaning "thunder" and "lizard." The name was given because the scientists thought the monster must have made a noise like thunder when he walked.

The brontosaurus is a member of the order of dinosaurs, or monster reptiles, and belongs to the sub-order of sauropoda or flesh-footed dinosaurs. Hitherto the most extensive remains of dinosaurs and brontosauri have been found in America, principally in Kansas and Colorado and Wyoming.

The brontosaurus was one of the largest creatures that ever walked on land. It must always be remembered that none of these extinct monsters was as large as the existing whale. The brontosaurus was about sixty feet long and weighed about twenty tons. It was a very stupid and slow moving creature, as befitted by the preposterously small size of its brain and the construction of its bones.

It was more or less amphibious in its habits, and Professor Marsh tells us that it fed upon aquatic plants and other succulent vegetation. Its remains are generally found in [illegible] where they may have become mired just as cattle of the present day sometimes become fixed in a swampy place on the banks of a lake or river. Each track made by the creature in walking occupied one square yard in extent.

This description of the dwelling place of the brontosaurus corresponds with the region where the strange animal that is reported to have been seen in South Africa.

Science Would Not Be Surprised.

By Prof. W. D. Matthew, of the American Museum of Natural History.

This report of the discovery [illegible] monster of a type [illegible] unknown, is by no means incredible, and the fact that [illegible] specimens of its kind known to be in existence would [illegible] the fact that it is of more ancient [illegible] than modern animals which are more abundant.

From the meagre details [illegible] for me to [illegible] what [illegible] species of prehistoric monster [illegible] may belong, although I [illegible] that [illegible] diverse.

The epoch of the dinosaurs closed some three [illegible] of years ago, and while it is not impossible that some type of prehistoric monster may have existed, it is far more probable that the animal discovered in Rhodesia belongs to a somewhat later period than that [illegible] the dinosaurs.

Of course [illegible] of a form [illegible] and [illegible] animals which have survived until comparatively [illegible] days. [illegible] evidence [illegible] that they were still [illegible] after the extinction of their race but the [illegible] by existence not [illegible] thousands of years ago—a period of which brought about the obliteration of the type must [illegible] which is insignificant in speaking of prehistoric ages. result in a short space of time in the extinction of every member of it.

Thus, in the case of the dinosaurs, it is probable that [illegible] there were land animals, whereas the Rhodesian creatures individual members of the type persisted for fifty or [illegible] said to infest the lakes; but there are untold numbers sixty thousand years after the race had been practically [illegible] of types which have become extinct "since the world beextinct as a result of unfavorable conditions, but even [illegible] to which the monster might belong, although, as of the [illegible] years which have elapsed since [illegible] it is impossible for me to place it definitely.

Same year [illegible] the okapi which may be described in general [illegible] as a cross between the antelope and the [illegible] was discovered, it [illegible] very clear [illegible] that the vast areas of the unexplored world there may still [illegible] be found by Carl Hagenbeck lends con- [illegible] to the theory [illegible] explanation [illegible] of an animal after the [illegible] of the [illegible] on the fact that nature works [illegible] slowly. The modern rifle had brought about, in a comparatively few years, the practical extinction of the American buffalo, and the same is true in the case of the African white rhinoceros, of which there are but [illegible] few specimens now in existence, but nature takes [illegible] more time.

The mammoth and the mastodon are examples of prehistoric animals which have survived until comparatively [illegible]

(From "Hints for Lovers," by Arnold Haultain, Published and Copyrighted by the Houghton Mifflin Co.)

THERE are, of course, girls and girls; yet at heart they are pretty much alike. In age, naturally, they differ widely. But this is a thorny subject. Suffice it to say that all men love all girls—the maid of sweet sixteen equally with the maid of "untold" age.

A girl is a complicated thing. It is made up of clothes, smiles, a pompadour, pouts, kisses (now and then), corsets, and other things of which space and prudence forbid the enumeration here. These things by themselves do not constitute a girl—which is obvious; nor is any one a girl without these things—which is not so obvious. Where the things end and the girl begins many men have tried to find out.

Most girls would like to be men—except on occasions. At least so they say, but perhaps this is just a part of the something-or-otherishness. Why they should want to be men, men cannot conceive. Men pay before them, grow hot and cold before them, run before them (and after them), swear by them (and at them), and a bit of a chit of a thing in short skirts and lisle-thread stockings will twist able-bodied males round her little finger.

Some foolish men—probably poets—have ought for and asserted the existence of the ideal girl. This is sheer nonsense—there is no such thing. And if there were, she could not compare with the real girl, the girl of flesh and blood—which (as some one ought to have said) are excellent things in woman.

Girls often play with love as if it were one of the amusements of life; but a day comes when love proves itself the most serious thing on earth.

A woman's heart is an unfathomable ocean—nothing ever fished it, no one ever plumbed it. At the surface are glancing waves, or flying spume, or, it may be, raging billows; beneath are silent depths invisible to man. A thousand streams flow into it in vain. Towards varying coast lines it bears itself variability; here, placid and content, there, dashing, furious. But none ever stamped his mark upon its brim, and always it remains the refluent, relucent sea. Of it man knows only the wave that breaks or ripple at his feet. It betrays no secrets; it asks not to be understood. Storm and calm but stir or still its surface, and what things it hides forever engulfed no one may learn. Subtle, yet mighty; an eternal, an entrancing, mystery to man.

It is difficult to say which have played the greater havoc among men—the women with too much conscience, or the women with none.

Speak to a woman disparagingly of her sex—she is up in arms. Speak to her disparagingly of a member of her sex, it is difficult to pronounce which of her attitudes will not be up in arms. The reason of her bellicosity in the former case is the fact that a woman always interprets abstract disparagement of her sex personally. And she is perfectly right.

A woman would much rather you talked to her concerning herself than to at you told her unpleasant things to her comprehension of them). And with women tears are always dangerously near the lids.

Many a woman has surreptitiously made love to a man—and few are the men who have detected it.

A woman will fall in love herself bodily over and over again, but only because the previous owner, rashly cashiered, or weakly maintained, his ownership.

Every woman at the bottom of her heart delights to be owned, and tacitly and secretly seeks the man who she thinks will glory in that ownership and keep his property safe—not only from material harms, but from temptations to changes of ownership—in which last little fact lies a curious truth.

Love to some is an intoxicant, to others and ailment. To all it is a necessity.

Some loves, like some fevers, render the patient immune—at all events to that particular kind of contagion.

Many a woman really does not know whether she is "in love" or not. She is sought—that she perceives; but which of her seekers is worthiest, which most serious, which merely takes her fancy, and which appeals to her heart—on these matters she meditates long to the exasperation, of course, of the individual seeker.

To prefer honor to love is a maxim to women unknown. To them love is honor. And therefore the maxim is meaningless—and needless.

A woman knows a man is in love with her long before he is aware of it himself. Except perhaps in this one circumstance—when she herself is in love with somebody else. And then only in this important circumstance.

To some, love never comes; to some, it comes too often; but the same love never recurs, as never a bud opens twice—happy he or she who gains bud, blossom and fruit; since the greatest love is that wherein the odorous flower of passion ripens into the nourishing fruitage of affection.

A man, when first he is in love, is absorbed in the contemplation of the object of his love. A woman similarly situated is capable of making comparisons.

There are as many ways of making love as there are of making soup. And probably there are as many kinds of love as there are of flavors. And palates—both sentimental and physical—evidently differ widely. And yet, if you would know the secret of success with women, it is said in a word—order. And would ye, O women, know in a word the secret of success with men? It lies in responsiveness.

Let no man think to cope with feminine strategy.

A man imagines he wins by strenuous assault. The woman knows the victory was due to surrender.

No woman can be coerced into love—though she may be coerced into marriage.

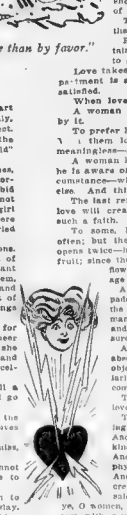
A woman really in love and sure of her lover delights in toying with a sort of coquetry of love, as if it pleased her to try to win over again that the winning of which gave so exquisite a pleasure. And perhaps the coquetry of love is the surest test of an unquestionable love.



"What a man doesn't know about a girl would fill a Saratoga trunk; what he does know about her would go into her work-box."

Courtship was for each payment—matrimony has often to allow unlimited credit. Insolvency is not unknown.

Man is by nature probably nomadic and polygamic; not his debate whether to give rein to emotion. Woman, by nature, is for different case. For the sake of her child, woman must bind the sound to herself. Accordingly, it is woman who is the true exploiter and evolver of society. Therefore, it comes about that to order what her emotions is the inherited instinct of woman. Wherefore, woman is the conserver of the nation—and this in more senses than one.

There are two elements of character which a man should possess, develop and maintain unstained if he would find favor in feminine eyes. the first is bravery, the second indomitableness of resolution. So likewise, there are two elements of character which a woman should possess, develop and maintain unstained if she would find favor in masculine eyes: the first is sympathy, the second keenness of temper.

A curious and latent hostility divides the sexes. It seems as if they could not approach each other without alarums and excursions. Always the presence of the one arouses anxiety in the breast of the other, they stand to arms; they resort to tactics; they manoeuvre, and men and women approach one another visored and in armor. But it is often only to conceal the craven heart that beats beneath the brazen cuirass.

In one thing does friendship excel love—it is always reciprocal; one friend presupposes another. Not so a lover.

It is impossible to conjecture in what an exchange of confidences may terminate—it may be a kiss, or it may be a quarrel.

"What is more delectable to a girl than to have captured a real man?"

"The same love never recurs, as never a bud opens twice."

Never was there a man who could be at once friend and lover. Which is only one more proof that never will the sexes understand each other.

From the days of the first woman to the days of the New one, love, its wiles and its whims, has been the serious business of woman.

If the sexes were to change places, more mere marriage licenses would be taken out.

Between man and man, to lay another under pecuniary obligation is to jeopardize friendship. Between man and woman, a like cause brings about an opposite result.

It is difficult to say to which sex it is a greater compliment that widows always prove such successful fascinators. Either they still have a pen hart for mankind, despite their intimate acquaintance with him—in which case the men may congratulate themselves; or else they have so completely found men out that they find no difficulty in entrapping them—in which case it is the women's turn to applaud.

Men regard the avowed coquette not at all with malice, but with a very opposite feeling, of which perhaps amusement, admiration and a certain amicable defiance are the chief ingredients.

For a woman to humiliate one man in the presence of another is an offense which neither of the men is likely to forget. Nor will the one man have a less unpleasant recollection of it than the other.

Much more kissing than is supposed goes by purchase than by favor. All which, probably, will be Greek to the uninitiated. Nevertheless, at all times and in all places, a kiss is like faith—it is "the evidence of things not seen, the substance of things hoped for."

It takes two to make a quarrel. Yes; and it takes two to make the reconciliating kiss.

What more delectable to a girl than to have captured and kept a real man? This flatters her, uplifts her, makes of her a woman at once—she holds her head higher; she carries herself with an air, she shows off her capture. Besides, also, the engaged girl is looked up to by her compeers, is congratulated by leaders. Even if she keeps the engagement secret, these compensations do not (sometimes, alas to her detriment). In addition to all this, what delight so unique as the preparation of the trousseau.

The moment a woman accepts a man, then and there he becomes her lord and master. And this she unconsciously knows—nay, expects. If the man does not then and there exercise his lordship and show his mastery, he will find it difficult to do it later on. It is of course to woman will ever be got to admit that her newly wonman is her master. Nevertheless it is council that every man should lay to heart, for, unless a woman is dominated, she tries to get the upper hand. And only two instances there are in which the woman should retain the upper hand—when the man is either a philosopher or a fool.

The married pair who live in amity must so live that each shall persuade the other that either is the sole personage under the roof of beauty that he or she desires. Alas!

What is the ideal marriage? That, perhaps in which the man is to the woman at once friend, husband and lover. But some people prefer these functions distinct.

There are few proofs of the happiness of a marriage so potent as the ability and inclination of the husband and wife to write, the one to the other when they are apart, letters redolent of the love of courtship.

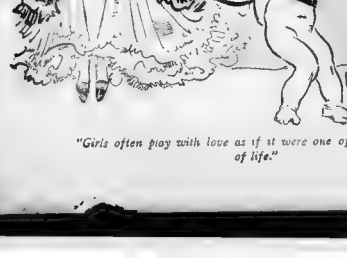
Nursing as a Pastime for Women of Leisure.



HERBERT SPENCER has been quoted as saying that the question of women almost exclusively as a question as a means of livelihood is a trouble in England, and that the pursuit of its modern line in life opportunity it affords for sacrifice." But in nursing as in every other profession, proficiency can only be attained by systematic training and hard work. Perhaps no other [illegible] philanthropic work is so peculiarly suited to the kindly and efficient woman. There are certain [illegible] Again, [illegible] or [illegible] difficulties [illegible] of place or many [illegible] impose failure. Every [illegible] ing desire to serve a real [illegible] in order to exercise [illegible] of a nurse's work [illegible] ion which becomes more [illegible] ering, or which brings [illegible] in the gaining of practical [illegible] hospital life before [illegible] enter upon it in the right [illegible] a girl [illegible] ever yet become a nurse [illegible] or anybody else, who [illegible] lp her mind to submit to [illegible] to the unpleasant [illegible] drudgery, but which women [illegible] sense will soon perceive to [illegible] efficiency.

[illegible] not sufficiently in earnest [illegible] and to live up to their [illegible] be disheartened by comparatively [illegible] will never become real [illegible] ion who are full of themselves [illegible] d inspired with a heartfelt [illegible] their patients and to learn how to perform their welfare are quickly weeded out when the practical test of work [illegible] reveals their want of [illegible] their professed desire to become [illegible] nurses.

The [illegible] of the largest hospital in London [illegible] numbers—including its staff—a total of over 700 [illegible] the course of the year [illegible] attract with scores of women [illegible] who would like "to take up" nursing.

The motives which prompts them are as varied as human nature itself. Many wish for a change because their home life is not what they like or because they have become wearied of the [illegible] ing. A stepmother or a stepfather changing the conditions of home life in the real sense very frequently alleged for a desire to take up nursing. Some turn their attention to it because their lives are "blighted" for the time being, many more because they are under the necessity of earning their own livelihood, and the work of nursing appeals to some of these because it combines the object with the fulfilment of a long-cherished desire to devote themselves to this special work. It is work which, entered upon in the right spirit, develops every side of a woman's nature. Her sympathies grow and become more perceptive with the constant demand made upon them.

Nursing is hard, practical and exacting work, with a full share of prosaic details to make up the sum of everyday life. And it is not to be undertaken by those who seek opportunities for monopolizing the limelight, or who are on the lookout for exciting and dramatic incidents of a romantic character. It does not expect to find the harrowing and emotional scenes which the second-rate novelist depicts from a misguided imagination. But it affords unrivalled opportunities for exercising tender administrations upon suffering men, women and children, and of cheerfully performing the endless round of small services which, when they are rendered with a kindly spirit, sanctifies and ennobles commonplace duties.

If a woman is not inspired by the right motives and by a genuine desire to help others, nursing itself will prove irksome and disagreeable, and when this remains the case after the first difficulties of making a beginning have been overcome it is a sure indication that the would-be nurse has no vocation for the work which, for some personal reason or other, she has taken up.

Nursing is work that becomes a gentlewoman in the highest meaning of the word. But it cannot be said too emphatically that any woman taking it up must regard it as work, and not as a means of obtaining a little fresh excitement.

WHAT WILL PRESTON GIBSON DO NEXT?

After Using Washington Monument As a Plaything, Discovering Nazimova and Producing Several Plays of His Own, He Is Now the Friend of All Unproduced Authors.

"Charlie" Street Catching His High Ball.

THIS advertisement, which appeared in a Washington paper not only made a sensation, but made a social Washington gasp, but added one more item to the varied and spectacular career of the versatile young millionaire, Preston Gibson, of, respectively, New Orleans, New York, Chicago and Washington.

His friends knew that he was "theatre-bitten," for he had written half a dozen plays, produced two or three of them, and had discovered Nazimova.

But being a playwright himself, why should he bother about other people's plays? He would be deluged with manuscripts. Everybody writes plays. You couldn't go out on Broadway, New York, and fire a gun without hitting an author with a play in his pocket.

The prophecy was speedily fulfilled. Mr. Gibson's office was stacked high with plays, all original stage manuscripts. And he doesn't pay. Though a millionaire, he goes down to his office at 9 a. m. and reads plays like a slave till 6 p. m. Up to date he has read an even hundred, and hardly made an impression on the pile as yet.

Originally and successful dramatists have submitted their plays to Mr. Gibson, who, like a good many others, suggested to the author that the book of a play is a mere joke compared with getting it produced. They are anxious to be produced on any terms—for a start.

This is accepted as the explanation of Mr. Gibson's offer to read the plays of unknown authors. Out of a hundred passed on to the big dramatic editors to criticise, fifty turn up and produce, according to specifications.

The very first interesting thing that Preston Gibson ever did was to be born a millionaire, he is the son of the late Senator Gibson, of New Orleans, one of the first millionaires to obtain a seat in the United States Senate, and the nephew of Mr. Justice White, of the Supreme Court.

And Preston Gibson's thirty years of life have been rapid and interesting and decidedly unusual for a gentleman of unlimited means and unlimited leisure. His friends and club-fellows sit idly by and watch his every movement with interest.

Last May he simply turned, not only Washington but the whole country, topsy-turvy, by one of his notions. At that time New York was playing Washington at the American League grounds and Preston Gibson, "Ned" McLean and Joe Leiter were excited fans at one of the games in which "Charlie" Street was catcher. Street went after an unusually high ball and caught it.

A discussion arose [illegible] and finally Washington land in the [illegible] baseball.

The arrival of [illegible] in case the permission from the War Department was [illegible] next morning lined himself to that executive and dignified department on his curious errand.

And he was successful, as he is about most things he undertakes. Armed with the permit, a couple of dozen baseballs and a wooden chute on which to [illegible] out of the window, accompanied by a number of friends, Charley Street, photographers and a detail of police, Mr. Gibson appeared at the monument.

The permit was duly honored. Mr. Street stationed himself at the foot of the mast, while the chute on the outside, and Mr. Gibson at the very [illegible] began [illegible] the chute. Almost [illegible] ranged, and the signal given, Mr. Gibson leaned far out, saw a speck [illegible] Charley Street, and slid the ball to it. The speck [illegible] saw what appeared to be a pinhead, afterward a marble, and finally a baseball, rapidly advancing, extended his arms to it and missed.

Twelve more times the balls shot the chute, and the thirteenth sphere landed squarely in the catcher's heavily padded glove, [illegible] crowd that had collected cheered lustily, and [illegible] waved a flag [illegible] man at the top of the shaft that the experiment had been successful.

Then the trouble began. A newspaper man started it by doing a little figuring on his own account as to how fast the ball traveled. Then, it appeared as if everybody in the United States started to do a little arithmetic on his own account, and the papers devoted columns to the new "How old is Ann?" puzzle. Everybody had a different equation, and it is still a matter of speculation as to the correct answer.

Before Preston Gibson was sixteen he had written a play and produced it in a large auditorium, especially built for the occasion on his father's estate. The play was called "Her Choice," and the first dollar the young million-aire earned by the sweat of his own brow, he received from the manager of a small Western company, who bought the play outright for a hundred dollars from the embryo playwright, who was well pleased with the bargain.

Preston Gibson's next adventure was his entrance to Yale University, where [illegible] build and pronounced King for [illegible] portium, especially built for the occasion [illegible] big college spirit [illegible] Inevitably the football [illegible] in 1905, when that never-to-be-forgotten and [illegible] big-to-nothing game, that placed Old Yeath giving John, between Harvard and Yale, on Soldier's Field, he covered himself and [illegible] end" with everlasting [illegible]

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 53—The Tonic Bath

by Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

THE tonic value of the bath, and the special bath for the special need and special person, are the subjects of Mme. Cavalieri's excellent article today. She says that when she visited Paris recently and made a tour of the beauty shops she found that beauty doctors were giving more baths and fewer medicines, which was likewise true of the doctors of medicine. She gives among other valuable formulae one which rests and stimulates the person who is fatigued.

Mme. Cavalieri's theme next week will be "What I Have Learned from my Doctor."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

ON my last visit to Paris I found that women who desired to be beautiful were taking less medicine and more baths. The medical directors, who are probably the greatest beauty doctors, because they teach that beauty depends almost wholly on health, are teaching them the tonic and the sedative influences of the bath. They are teaching them that of varieties of baths there is no end. They tell them there is one sort of bath for the anemic person, another for the too full-blooded person, one for the person who sleeps too little, another for the one who sleeps too much.

For every temperament and for every condition there is the special bath. But there are some general rules which all should know. For instance these:

The bath of cistern or rainwater is the best for the skin, because it is the "softest"—that is, the purest water, being unmixed with the minerals which well water collects on its tour through the various strata of earth, and which "hardens" it.

The cold bath is a stimulant for those who are strong enough to react from it. The test is whether after the cold plunge the skin turns red. If it turns blue the vitality is not sufficient to bear such heroic treatment. Cold baths should not be taken without the advice of a competent physician.

The hot bath is soothing, but if taken too often is enervating. Once a week, under ordinary circumstances, is often enough for a hot bath.

The tepid bath, graduated to a cool bath by letting the cold water run in as the warm water runs off, is the best daily bath.

For the person who perspires excessively, a tablespoonful of ammonia to ten gallons of water is corrective.

For the seaside bath, five pounds of table salt dissolved in a tubful of water at home is a very good substitute. This, followed by a shower or spray, will lend the illusion of Ostend or Atlantic City.

But besides these simple baths, that any one may take, there are some that are complex, and that only those who have for a time at least, some spare hours to spend at their toilets may trouble to take. This is what my physician ordered when I had come from a Russian tour, weary from travel and in that state of depression that follows extreme weariness. Used in tepid water every morning I found it invigorating:

| | |
|---|---|
| Bromide of potassium | 1 gram |
| Carbonate of calcium | 1 gram |
| Carbonate of soda | 300 grams |
| Sulphite of soda | 300 grams |
| Sulphite of iron | 3 grams |
| Oil of lavender | 2 grams |
| Oil of thyme | 1 gram |
| Oil of rosemary | 1 gram |

| | |
|---|---|
| Tincture of quillaigue | 10 grams |
| Glycerine | 20 grams |
| Oil of bergamot | 3 drops |

The extremely nervous person, whose skin is much irritated, may take the starch bath I have described and add to it a pint of vinegar.

Discreet bathing, besides its first office of cleanliness, aids and even cures anaemia, dullness, obesity, rheumatism, neuralgia and even St. Vitus's dance.

The hot water treatment for pimples is more efficacious than most medicines given for that purpose. The application of soft cloths dipped in hot water has effected a cure in a few days.

A class of skin diseases that produce pustules on the skin, these pustules eventually bursting and forming crusts, are alleviated and sometimes cured by a systematic course of warm baths. The falling of the crusts like dandruff, and the gradual healing, may be brought about by two warm baths daily. Tetter is one of these forms that has been cured by warm water baths and careful, tender drying with soft towels.

An object lesson in the value of the warm bath in soothing the nervous system is seen in the case of children screaming with the colic, who cease their cries and grow sleepy as soon as they are placed in a tub of warm water.

If possible, baths not less than two hours before eating nor three hours after eating.

Never take a bath while very tired. There will be no reaction—that is, the blood will not leap to the surface as under favorable circumstances it makes its response to the bath, and the bath will merely reduce further the lowered vitality.

A little exercise just before bathing and a little exercise after, aids the good effects of the bath. The exercise before opens the pores for their reception of the water. The exercise afterward permits the entrance of sun and air into the pores too little accustomed to either.

Light exercise after the drying of the skin with a soft towel and before enveloping it with clothes is a splendid tonic and a wonderful beautifier. I know a half dozen beautiful Parisiennes who have had their bathrooms built in that part of the house most exposed to the sunshine, and at the top of the house, and, opening from these, have built small sun parlors, square rooms with roofs and sides entirely of glass. Here they exercise for from five to ten minutes, jumping the rope or flexing the arms and legs and head. One vigorous beauty has a blanket spread upon the floor of her sun parlor, and upon this turns somersaults, to make her body pliant and to assure herself that her circulation is free. Some of these exercises are illustrated by the silhouettes on this page.

During the gymnastics they are unclad, or if clothed are merely wrapped in a light, loose dressing gown. After the bath and the exercise some Parisiennes repose for an hour upon a couch in the sun parlor, their hair hanging loose and their faces protected only by a delicate shade, like a fire screen, from the too strong rays of the sun.

Bathe in a room whose temperature is at least 68 or 70 degrees. Ordinarily the room should be as warm as the water in which you bathe.

For those who dislike soaps, or if they do not dislike, at least distrust them, lanolin milk is a valuable aid or even a substitute.

| | |
|---|---|
| Lanolin | 35 grains |
| Water | ½ ounce |
| Pure Castile soap | 30 grains |

Pour the lanolin into the water. Heat slowly. The soap should be dissolved in a half ounce of water. Mix and shake well.

Glycerine soap is one of the best for the Winter. Those soaps containing bran and oatmeal are also excellent for preserving the softness of the skin in this trying season.

Almond meal poured into the wet hands and forming a paste, which is gently rubbed upon the face and hands, is the best substitute for soap for the face bath.

The ordinary daily bath is not enough for the feet, which are of coarser fibre. They have larger pores, from which much perspiration is discharged . . . there is a greater discharge of dead matter from the soles of the feet than from any other part of the body of the same area. For this reason and because the feet are more exposed to dust than any other part of the body except the face, there should be a special daily footbath.

It is, by the way, helpful in calling the blood away from the head to the feet. I always take my footbath a little warmer than my body bath, say 90 degrees, I scrub them with a flesh . . . well soaped, for there cannot, fortunately, be too much soap used upon the feet. A teaspoonful of borax or a teaspoonful of ammonia aids the cleansing.

From Chester, Pa., comes a request for a remedy for liver spots on the forehead. Liver spots are deep seated and obstinate. They rarely yield to mere external treatment. A case which I recall was treated with an internal remedy. A large pill of taraxacum was taken every other night for a month. The diet was also so regulated that fruit and vegetables predominated.

At the same time this, which is the most candid and least drastic of all the external remedies recommended for the purpose, was applied at night, the mixture being spread upon a plaster:

Gradually the scarf skin will disappear, carrying with it the objectionable spots. The spots should be washed several times a day thereafter with borax water, a healing salve or lotion.

"A little exercise just before bathing aids the good effects of the bath."

How a Gland in the Throat May Regulate Sleep.

THE scientists have still to find out what good the vermiform appendix does anybody, but the thyroid gland, a little organ situated in the throat just below the larynx, which has hitherto been just as much of a mystery to medical men, now turns out to be one of the most important organs of the body.

As the result of researches conducted by Dr. A. Lorand, a well known German scientist, it appears that this long-despised gland regulates sleep, and gives it its value.

In view of the fact that sleep has always been considered one of the most essential performances of the human body, the importance of the functions of the thyroid gland can hardly be overestimated.

The Poison of Fatigue.

In recent years it has been scientifically established that bodily and mental fatigue are both caused by actual poisons or toxins in the system, which, in turn, are the result of physical and mental work. When the system is charged with these poisons, drowsiness overtakes it and does not disappear until brain and body have enjoyed the benefits of sleep. But while the scientists have realized that these fatigue-poisons leave the system during sleep, they have been quite at a loss to explain the process by which they are expelled.

Now, however, Dr. Lorand comes out with the assertion that it is the little gland in the throat through which the fatigue-poisons are collected and dissipated during sleep, and he has collected a lot of data in support of his theory.

While the exact functions of the thyroid gland have never been understood the medical profession, experience has own that in some way or other it exercises considerable influence on the rest of the system. When the gland becomes abnormally enlarged, resulting in the disease known as goitre, the brain is usually affected, and the wits become dulled. Then again, whenever surgeons have removed the gland entirely in certain cases, the operation has been followed by symptoms of a most serious nature, of which mental dullness was the most common. But just why it was that the removal of a gland in the throat should have such a serious effect on the brain was a complete mystery to scientific men.

When the Gland Goes.

Dr. Lorand's explanation is that removal of the gland results inevitably in auto-intoxication and produces the distressing mental symptoms observed. In other words, the fatigue-toxins which accumulate in the human body cannot be thoroughly expelled without the action of the thyroid.

The structure of the thyroid gland lends confirmation to the new theory. Although it weighs but little more than an ounce and is only about an inch and a half wide by an inch deep, it is profusely supplied with arteries and veins. It is easy to see how the poisoned blood, passing through these numerous blood vessels may be purified and cleansed by the thyroid gland's peculiar properties and returned to the system entirely free from the toxins with which it was formerly charged.

Dr. Lorand's attention was first called to the functions of the thyroid gland while observing the condition of a man suffering from the sleeping sickness. He noticed that the man displayed the same unsteady walk, the same striking apathy, slowness of motion, deliberate speech, weakness of memory, dry skin, slow pulse and other phenomena which characterize myxedema, a disease which is known to arise from degeneration of the thyroid gland. Myxedema frequently follows an infectious disease, and is the result of the abnormal activity of the thyroid gland in its effort to protect the body from the effects of the infectious matter in the system. This overwork breaks down the gland and the disastrous symptoms follow.

Inferring that the sleeping sickness might be attended with a similar breaking down of the thyroid gland, Dr. Lorand administered thyroid tablets to his sleeping-sickness patients, and was gratified to find that all of the distressing symptoms disappeared almost immediately.

Further research and experimentation showed that the removal or degeneration of the thyroid gland produced sleepiness, and that, on the other hand, an overactivity of the same gland produced sleeplessness.

Dr. Lorand found that sleepiness could be remedied by increasing thyroid activity, which he accomplished by administering thyroid-gland extract.

The Sleeping Fat Man.

Very favorable results were obtained with this treatment in the case of an excessively fat patient, who weighed about 280 pounds and would fall asleep with extraordinary ease, even when standing or walking.

In describing the case, Dr. Lorand said: "This man was once arrested in the Versailles picture gallery, after falling asleep involuntarily while viewing the pictures, and allowed himself to be incarcerated as a thief, for which he was mistaken. One day he was arrested by the police in Carlsbad under the suspicion of being drunk, because he was found asleep in the street. In addition to the usual Carlsbad cure, I treated him with thyroid gland extract, and in a few weeks got him so that he would not fall asleep in my waiting room. After six weeks he was restored, and his weight had been reduced about thirty-nine and a half pounds.

"Experimenting upon myself, I took five grains of thyroid gland daily for some weeks. As a result I began to suffer from sleeplessness, and so powerful was the effect that it did not entirely disappear completely until a week after stopping the tablets."

The Glow-Worm

by Carl Ewald

Translated from the Danish by A. Teixeira de Mattos

IT was night, and the sky was full of stars.

The dog lay asleep in his kennel and the cat in the garret and the people in their beds. The wind had gone down, no one knew where. When there was a breath in the air it was the bat, who skimmed noiselessly past on his soft wings. When the bushes rustled it was the mouse or the hedgehog on his way to some midnight revelry.

But the tall, black lime trees that stood in an avenue right down to the gate shed so sweet and heavy a perfume that the bees could not sleep in their hives for longing.

Only in one window in the whole house was there a light burning.

The window was open, and, framed in it, sat the prettiest girl in the world and looked out into the dark, silent garden. She sat quite still, and round the window there were green tendrils, so that she looked like a portrait round which some one had hung a wreath.

Then the nightingale began to sing:

Weet-a—Weet-a—Weet-a—Weet—

It was just one trill, as though he wished to try how his voice sounded in the silence.

"Well—nightingale?" the girl said.

The nightingale said nothing. Then she clapped her hands and sang, so that it rang through the garden:

Nightingale—nightingale—
Sweetly thro' the thicket flows
Thy joyous, golden greeting
Tell me, where my true love goes
And when will fall our meeting?
While thy song, nightingale,
Sweetly thro the thicket flows,
If thou seest him, bring him,
Home to my whidow sing him!

Weet-a—weet-a—weet—
Away behind the moss-green wall
Slumbers my true love among fine roses;
And mine are the five eggs, sweet and small,

Weet-a—weet-a—weet-a—weet—
While she watches her treasure,
I sing to her, true and trusty;
Ere one of sun will be born, maybe,
Five youngsters, merry and lusty!

"Yes—you are well off, nightingale, dear," said the girl. "You think only of yourself."

Then she bent as far out of the window as she could, and with her bright eyes looked up at the full lime trees and sang:

Linden flower—linden flower—
Through lanes and meadow grasses
Shed thy perfume, strong and sweet,
When my true love passes!
Tell him it is good to roam
In my garden's shadow!
Linden flower—Linden flower—
Breathe o'er lane and meadow!

Hush!—Hush!—
Little girl, be quiet!
Nightingale with tuneful riot
Do not stir my buds asleep!
Steeped in fragrance they are dreaming.
While on every fruit's fine kernel,
Born beneath night's arch eternal,
All the stars of Heaven peep.

"That is beautiful," said the girl. "I love to hear it. But what good is it to me?"

And the nightingale sang again, happily and long, and the limes smelt sweet and strong, and the girl felt heavier at heart than she could possibly tell.

Then she looked down into a rose bush that stood just under the window, and set her eyes on a little light that shone on one of the leaves. She cautiously took hold of the branches and saw that the light came from a strange little animal, a worm with long hair all over her body.

"Who are you?" she asked.

"I am the glow worm," said the animal. "Have you seen my sweetheart?"

"No, indeed I haven't. Have you seen mine?"

"No, am so awfully unhappy!"

She writhed on the leaf and shone till it hurt one's eyes to look at her.

"Dear me, you poor thing!" said the girl. "You are just like me. If only you had wings and could fly away to your sweetheart!"

"Who knows if that would be any good?" said the glow worm. "We might miss each other if we both flew—for he has wings, you know. Now if here and shine, so that he can find me."

"Oh, so that's why you shine!" said the girl "Why, then, it's just like the light in my window! I put it there also so that my sweetheart can see it a long way off, if he comes."

"Yes—that's it, that's the question," said the glow worm, and gave a deep sigh "But, if you will allow me—why don't you go to your sweetheart?"

"Save us!" she said, and blushed. "That would be a nice thing for a young girl to go running after her sweetheart in the middle of the night!"

"Oh, well!" said the worm. "Yes—in that case you're really no better off than I."

"Tell me a little about your sweetheart," said the girl. "I dote on love stories What is he like to look at?"

"I have never seen him," said the glow worm.

"No, I haven't, really. Have you seen yours?"

"Have I?" said she, and laughed. "I should think I had! He is the handsomest, the most charming lad in the wide world."

"Yes, so is mine," said the worm. "If he had only seen me!"

"Hasn't he seen you, either?"

"No, he hasn't, really. And therefore I shine and shine and shine, so that he can find me."

But that's the saddest story I've heard for some time," said the girl, and great tears rolled down her cheeks. "My poor, poor little friend!"

"Ah, yes," said the glow worm. "Even if there were only not so many of us! Just look out into the garden and you will see how all the bushes are lighted up!"

"Yes," she said, "I see—five, six—seven, eight, nine—why, there are over twenty glow worms!"

"That's the sad part of it," said the worm. "But such is all girls' lot. You can't tell either if there's another girl who puts a light in her window and catches your sweetheart."

"You don't know my sweetheart," said the girl.

"I wish I knew my own!" said the worm

And then she wriggled and twisted and shone till she was nearly going to pieces But the girl did not notice it at all She leaned her head against the window-post and looked out into the garden with happy eyes.

"My sweetheart thinks of none but me," she said. "If he doesn't come to-day, he will come to-morrow. Then we will go and pay visits—and I am already working on my trousseau—it won't be so very long before we are married. Then I shall drive to church in a white gown and with a pair of white horses. The bells will ring and the organ play and the parson will preach a most beautiful sermon. And afterwards we shall drive home to the loveliest flat you can imagine."

"Yes," said the glow worm. "I shan't have quite as good a time as that. As soon as my sweetheart comes we shall be married, and that will be the end of it."

"Is that the end of it, when you're married?"

"Yes, indeed it is," said the worm. "Then I shall trudge around just for a day and lay my eggs, and then I shall die."

"Oh dear, oh dear!" said the girl, and wept as though she had been beaten. "That's terrible to listen to, when I am so happy myself. If only I could do something for you, you poor, dear little glow worm! But now I must go to bed. Else, I shall have red eyes to-morrow, and my sweetheart doesn't like that."

"Heigho!" said the worm.

The girl closed the window and pulled down the blind. But the glow worm shone and shone, until the sun rose and shone so brightly that every other light on the earth went out.

* * * * * * *

It was the glow worm. But she lay dead in the girl's hand with her rough bristles. The girl told her sweetheart all about what had happened on the night when she was sitting at her window and longing for him to come, and she could not help crying over the dead worm.

"That's quite right," he said. "That's what happened to the glow worm. Her sweetheart came at last and they were married, and then she laid her eggs and died. It was a poor sort of happiness, that, and not much to long for But you and I have something to long for, for we shall live together for ever so many years."

She was still standing with the dead insect in her hand and looking at it. One thought of the nightingale and the linden flowers, and felt that the glow worm was the nearest to her of them all.

"I don't know how it is," she said "but I think the glow worm's longin' was quite as good as mine."

"You're a darling," he said.

One always thinks that of one's sweetheart. But now she really was.

"Who are you?" she asked. "I am the glow worm," said the animal. "Have you seen my sweetheart?" "No, indeed I haven't. Have you seen mine?"

WHO KILLED PROFESSOR GREER?

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

MUCH mystery surrounds Kirdan Kirk, who lives modestly in Bath Road, Holford Park, London—is the son of Holford, motor engineer and dealer in motor cars, who lives with his wife a few doors distant. Elsewhere in London they have seen this shabby person dressed in the height of fashion, in company with notable people. The latter has left Kirk visiting Holford at his motor then on a mysterious errand about a new tire. At his request, Holford visits him. Kirk describes himself as a "dealer in secrets," and tells of a recent murder which must be kept from the police. Although he is one of the persons in England who "cannot be arrested" needs a friend who is honest and a gentleman. To this object Holford, who promises friendship and silence. The assassin's victim is the celebrated Professor Greer, who Kirk says, was a blackguard. Never the surprise that may rest on Kirk. Although he is a clever liar, he admits that on the night of the murder, committed in his laboratory, adjoining an apartment occupied by Greer, he was in the house, telling his daughter Ethelwyn that he had been called to Edinburgh.

Holford goes to Edinburgh, determined to trace dead Professor Greer's impersonator, but fails. He returns to London to find that his wife has been lured away from Turin, Italy. He follows with his wife's sister, Gwen, and in Florence discovers that his wife has been there with an athletic man, whom Holford believes to be Kirk. They have decided for Rome. Holford hastens on to Rome, more than ever convinced that his wife has been abducted by Kirk. He does not find her, but does learn that Mrs. Holford, under the name of Mrs. Hamilton Erlance, but makes dark threats when Holford proposes to go to the Italian police. Holford decides to return to England and, through the aid of Detective Pyne, he soon has Kirk under surveillance. Pyne is pleased to discover that she believes her father to be still alive. He discovers hrs of collusion with the impostor. Holford visits Kirk's home, and recovers a letter written by Mrs. Holford to Kirk, which he had taken from Broadstairs. He resolves to go to Strasburg, but Dr. Hamilton Erlan in Langford's name, and Holford receives a telegram from Dr. Erlan, who offers to help Holford find his wife. Holford learns that his wife has been deceived by Dr. Erlan.

Holford learns that his wife has been deceived by Dr. Erlan. Those he witnesses Kirk's arrival from the Continent follows him to apartments where he finds an "Mrs. Hamilton" and threatens him with vengeance.

"YES." I said, advancing foward him a couple of paces in a manner which by now must have appeared threatening. "And you know more about the trap into which my poor wife has been led than anybody else. That is why I'm here tonight—to compel you to speak—you crafty old cur!"

"My dear Holford, why—what's the matter?" he asked, even then quite unperturbed. "Now if I did not know you so well, I might easily be annoyed, but I'm not. No doubt the loss of Mrs. Holford has seriously upset you." And the fellow actually smiled at this.

"You make pretence of ignorance?" I cried. "You think that I believe you when you say you know nothing of where she is, but"——

"I assure you, Holford, that these assertions of myself are entirely groundless. I have no knowledge whatever of the lady. I have seen her once or twice at her dining-room window, it is true."

"And yet I've been out to Florence, to the Grand Bretagne, where I was informed that you had been in her company—was my hasty reply.

"I can't help what cock-and-bull story you've been told by an Italian hotelkeeper. They are notorious for their untruths, as you would discover if you travelled much up and down Italy as I do," he said with an evil grin. "I can only tell you, once and for all, that I have no knowledge whatever of your wife's present whereabouts.

"Then who has?"

"How can I tell, my dear sir? You ask me a riddle. On my arrival at Carling Cross an hour ago one of my friends who met me told me of Mrs. Holford's sudden journey abroad and her disappearance into space. The story set me wondering as to the motive of the plot—for plot it undoubtedly must be. Mrs. Holford and yourself, it seems, have not devoted to each other. There is no reason for her leaving you, is there?"

"Not the slightest reason," I said. "I've been fooled quite long enough. As my wife has been enticed away and is held aloof in some unknown place, I give you full and ample warning of my intention. It is to go straight to the police, and while invoking their aid to try and find her, at the same time to get from the whole story of the affair at Sussex place, just as I know it."

The man half turned from me and bit his thin under lip. His grey, careworn countenance had become even more gray and more determined, while in his eyes I saw an evil glitter.

"Ah! You've been trying to seek a solution of the mystery for yourself. I know all about that!" He laughed hollowly. "But as you are aware of only half the tangled skein of mysterious acts, it is hardly likely that you'll succeed, do you think? Did I not tell you to remain silent and inactive? Instead of that, you've been chattering and trying to act the part of amateur detective. It was fatal. Because of that—and for that reason alone—the misfortune has been placed upon you."

"What misfortune?"

"The loss of your wife." It has occupied your mind in another way, just as it was intended by your enemies it should do."

"And yours is the master mind, Mr. Kirk, which has planned this subtle revenge!" I exclaimed, my anger hardly clenched in frantic desperation. "Because I disobeyed your extraordinary injunctions Mabel has been taken from me. You may as well admit the whole truth now at once."

"I admit nothing," he answered, drawing himself up defiantly.

"Then, by heaven, I'll force you to speak—to tell me where she is!" I shouted, as I raised my hands with a sudden movement. And then before he could ward me off my fingers closed upon his throat, so that he breathed only with great difficulty.

"Give me time—time to make—inquiry!" he gasped. "I've only just returned, and am in ignorance of a great deal of what has transpired."

"Upon your own admission Mabel has fallen a victim of a plot merely because I became too active and too inquisitive. You feared lest I might discover——"

"I have admitted nothing, my dear sir," he cried. "One day you will withdraw all these malicious words—mark me," he added in a hard voice, lowering his weapon and replacing it in his hip-pocket as I released my convulsive grip.

"I've lost my wife, Mr. Kirk, and you know where she is," I said.

"In that you are quite mistaken," he declared. "As I've already explained, I've not yet had opportunity for making inquiry. "I believed," he added in reproach, "that you would assist me in this strange affair concerning Professor Greer. Yet my confidence in you, Holford, has been rudely misplaced. Recall for one moment what I told you—of the seriousness of what was at stake and of the absolute necessity for complete secrecy. Yet to-night you threaten to go and bungle the whole affair by going to the police."

"I've lost my wife!" I interrupted. "She's the victim of some plot or other, and it is to find her that I intend to invoke the aid of Scotland Yard."

"Well, by adopting that course you would not find her—but you'd lose her," was the old fellow's brief response.

"Antonio told me the very same thing when we met in Rome!" I exclaimed. "Your threat shows me that you are in league in this conspiracy of silence."

joke. It annoyed me that he did not take me seriously, and that he regarded the loss of Mabel so lightly.

"Look here, Mr. Holford," he said at last, looking straight into my face. "It's plain that you suspect me of being the assassin of Professor Greer. That being so, I've nothing more to say. Yet I would ask you to regard the present situation very soberly and calmly. Do you feared lest I might discover——" you for one moment suppose that were I guilty I would have taken you to Sussex Place and explained the whole affair in detail? Is it indeed to be supposed that I would place myself so entirely and completely in the hands of a stranger?"

"Well," he went on, "I repeat, to you now all that I told you that night, and assert that all I told you was the truth."

"But how do you account for Ethelwynn being still alive?" I interrupted quickly.

"There is an explanation of that," he declared, "one that you will probably be told very shortly. Fortunately the poor girl was not dead though I confess I was entirely deceived by the symptoms. You will remember that the mirror remained unclouded by her breath?"

"I remember every incident, alas! only too vividly," was my sullen, distinct reply. "But," I added very pointedly, "pray tell me, Mr. Kirk, what was your object in calling upon me and inducing me to go to Sussex Place?"

He thrust his hands into his trousers pockets and smiled.

"An ulterior one—as you may imagine. But one which was as much in your interests as in ours."

"Call them so if you wish," he laughed. "I unfortunately am not in a position to be enlightened you upon the actual reason I invoked your aid."

"And your action has only brought upon me a great misfortune—bitter despair and the loss of the woman I loved!" I cried, dismayed.

"Ah!" he said. "You judge me a little too hastily, Mr. Holford. It is your failing, Mr. Holford, that you are given to rushing to premature conclusions. That is always fatal in any delicate negotiation. When you've had my experience—that of a traveller and through-going cosmopolitan—you will learn . . . to repress your own opinions until they are fully and entirely corroborated."

I looked into the grey face of the clever adventurer, and there saw craft, cunning and an ingenuity that was superhuman. A look was in his eye such as I had never before seen in those of any human being.

"But I am in search of my wife!" I cried frantically. "I am in no mood to hear this philosophy of yours."

"Well—how do you know she is not here—in London?" he asked, waving his left hand towards me, whereby were showed the glimmering lights of the Thames bank.

"To the right, where I stood, I could see the stream of electricity from the summit of Big Ben, showing that the House, which had reassembled only a few days before, was sitting late. I jangling, as usual, after the Christmas recess.

"I suppose you wish to mislead me into the idea that she is back again in London hiding from me, sir?" I exclaimed resentfully. "No, Mr. Kirk, I tell you plainly that I've had enough of this tragic comedy of yours. I've wasted time this evening with your precious friends, Flynn and Langton."

"And pray, why should I not possess friends?" he asked, looking me with some surprise.

"Why, Langton denied all knowledge of you."

"Well—and am I to be blamed for Langton's pretended ignorance?"

"No. But it shows me that you are not dealing with me in a straightforward manner!" I declared, without minding words.

"My dear sir," he said in a few moments afterward, "I can quite distinguish your distrust of me, therefore it is well that I hesitated to place a further confidence in you. You might have betrayed it."

"Betrayed it!" I echoed angrily. "Have you not betrayed me? It is not due to you, and you alone, that my wife is missing?"

"That I emphatically deny, my dear sir," he replied, still quite unperturbed. "But why let us discuss it? Any denial of mine you'll regard as false. It's a great pity that my judgment led me to seek your aid. Had you carried out my request and refrained from prying into matters which did not concern you, you might have found it to your distinct advantage."

"You mean that I should have pro-

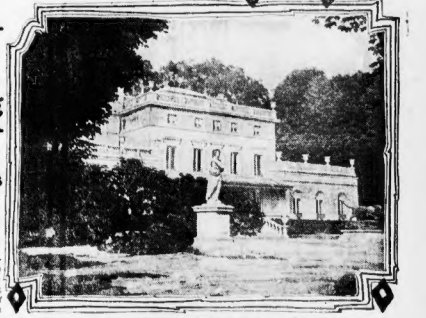
How the Bois-the Famous Paris Park-Supports Itself.

It Costs $142,000 to Maintain--But Restaurants, Race Courses, Clubs, Beautiful Villas--Even Its Chairs--Bring Paris $180,000 Each Year---Its Romantic History.

Two Queens Whose History Has Affected the Famous Park — Marie Antoinette and the Empress Eugenie.

The Afternoon Parade of Carriages Along the Bois.



The Chateau de Longchamps, Which Brings the City of Paris $8,000 a Year Rental.

By the COUNTESS BENOIST D'AZY.

PARIS has solved the problem of how to maintain a park—the most beautiful in the world—and have it a source of revenue rather than an expense.

Its Bois de Boulogne, a park of 1,630 acres, costs 710,000 francs, or $142,000, to maintain; but produces for the city treasury 900,000 francs—which in your American money is $180,000.

To be sure, the Bois is composed of many elements; its race courses, its restaurants, its clubs and its private villas, all of which not only contribute to the city's funds, but have a share in adding to the beauty of the whole.

The two largest sources of income are the Longchamps and Auteuil race courses, each of which pay annually to the City of Paris 200,000 francs.

Next, as regards figures, comes the Cercle du Bois de Boulogne, called the Cercle des Patineurs, but more generally known as the Tir aux Pigeons. This club, quite chic in its way, pays a rent of $12,000, while the Polo and Racing clubs pay only $5,000 each.

The Pavilion d'Armenonville has an annual rent of $7,000, while the Pre Catelan, so much more extensive, is taxed for only $5,000. This is understood when we learn that all the constructions in the Bois, while made at the expense of the tenant, become the property of the City of Paris.

Any tenant wishing to improve or replace the actual constructions of the Bois must submit his plans to a commission named by the municipal council.

Some years ago, M. Letellier, of the Journal, wishing to have at his disposal one of the charming little villas that belong to the Pre Catelan, was willing to construct the superb restaurant for which he paid not less than two millions of francs, or those that have it in their power to give this favor to another.

The Jewel of the Bois, the chateau of Bagatelle, recently purchased by the city from Sir William Wallace for the sum of $1,200,000, was built by the Comte d'Artois in sixty-four days to receive the visit of his sister-in-law, the fractious Marie Antoinette. It is constantly rented for art expositions of different sorts, imposing an entrance fee varying from 20 cents to $1. Here, too, is the wonderful garden containing 10 Bagatelle takes place each year the concourse des roses, when a prize is given for the one most admired. Those interested in flowers should go to the rose garden in the month of June, where the profusion of color and form in that "queen of flowers" is almost bewildering. But let me say in passing that you must not imagine that the most beautiful, not the most perfect, will take the prize. It is the newest color, the most unusual form, and we learn that roses have their vogue as well as horses and dogs. A horticulturist can tell you the parents and grandparents of any rose. The chateau of Madrid, the site of the chateau built by Francis I, is now being reconstructed and although just outside the gate of the Bois and consequently in Neuilly, is still regarded as property of the city of Paris. It brings in a considerable sum every year.

Just a word of the history of this Bois, which represents all that remains of the ancient forest of Rouvray, and which was just ten times larger than the actual Bois. In the seventh century the forest of Rouvray had a small population, all of which were employed on a farm belonging to the Roi Dagobert. To the south rose the windmills of Montmartre. Where now stands the Trocadero were a few scattered log cabins belonging to woodsmen, who maintained a commerce with fishermen living near St. Cloud in a small village called "Les Moines." This name was afterward changed into Passy, in that of Boulogne, as called from an adjoining church constructed in souvenir of a pilgrimage made to Notre Dame de Boulogne-sur-Mer.

Its Romantic History.

Doubtless the anti-clerical part of the Municipal Council is unacquainted with the history of their Bois, for they would certainly take umbrage at this pious origin of its name. When you think that the question was agitated of changing such names as Gaare, St. Lazare and Faubourg, St. Antoine because of their religious significance, this fear does not seem unreasonable. In the provinces, where these "anti-clericals" have less to fear, the names of streets and squares
